Defendant Testifies About Auto Crash Case Costing Three Lives

John Rotermund, One of Defendants in Supreme Court Action to Recover $35,000, Tells Story of Accident.

John Rotermund, driver of the Buick car which was in contact with the Sanford Ford coupe just prior to the fatal accident last July when three persons were killed near West Park, was the first witness called this morning in the $35,000 negligence action being brought by the mother and father of Josephine Tourisl, one of the victims, against Clifford T. Sanford and John Rotermund.

The Ford car after striking the Buick ran off the road to its right, struck a tree and a stone-wall and overturned on the road inflicting fatal injuries to three of the occupants of the coupe.

Rotermund who resides in West New York, N. J., testified that he was a route salesman for a dairy and that on July 16, last, the date of the accident, he was at Milton and had started to drive north to Kingston. At the time of the accident he was proceeding with his wife and two children at about 30 miles an hour. He was going down a grade and had just come around a slight curve when he saw the Ford car coming south at from 50 to 60 miles an hour. He was four feet over the center line of the road toward his right. He noticed the driver of the Ford was looking toward the west away from the Buick car and toward the passengers in the Ford car. There was a slight contact with the Buick and the Ford continued on down the road toward its right side of the road. Rotermund said this was about 150 feet from the tree which the Ford struck. He stopped his car and his wife called his attention to the fact that there had been an accident. He said he had felt the contact with his car. He was unable to tell how many people were in the Ford car. His car he said had traveled about 30 or 40 feet after the contact before he stopped. Shown testimony taken before Justice Carpenter about two weeks after the accident which contradicted the distances he testified to this morning he said the distances had not been measured but the ones given last summer were probably nearer correct than those given now.

After the contact with the Buick he saw the driver of the Ford make a grab for the wheel. He said the distance from the point of contact to the place where the Ford overturned was about 150 feet.

After stopping his car he ran back and pulled Sanford from the car and then took out Mary Arace and her sister. He then called to other people who had collected, for assistance to get the others out. People standing nearby had not known then that there were two others in the car. It was a clear day at the time of the accident which happened near the Lloyd-Esopus town line on the two strip concrete.

A number of photographs were offered showing various scenes of the point of the accident and the car of Rotermund.

Rotermund said his attention was called to the dented hub-cap on his car by Sergeant Lockhart. There was a scratch on the Buick fender where the cars had come in contact.

When Rotermund took the stand he informed the court that he had a severe cold and was a sick man and much of his testimony was given in a low voice which could not be heard clearly.

Black Shirts Pay Il Duce Homage

Rome, March 24 (AP)—Premier Mussolini, Fascist chieftain, today received the homage of a huge black shirt army congregated in Rome to commemorate the 14th anniversary of the formation of the party.

Rome donned gala attire to celebrate the anniversary. The music of massed bands lent a gay note to the ordinary clamor of the metropolis and thousands of festive citizenry crowded windows and balconies to watch the smart passage of fully uniformed Fascist units.

In the midst of the festivities Premier Mussolini took occasion to emphasize the solemn responsibilities attendant upon membership in his organization by personally receiving several hundred widows and mothers of Fascist and war dead.

A column of party founders, veterans and avanguardistas, or young black shirts, who arrived from Milan after celebrating the occasion in that city yesterday, formed at the Piazza Esedra at 9:45 a. m., as a signal for the anniversary ceremonies to commence. They were joined by Roman units of the organization and the war veterans.

Reforestation Plan Opposed By Green

Washington, March 24 (AP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, called the Roosevelt reforestation plan one smacking "of Fascism, Hitlerism and a form of Sovietism" today in asserting he had deep apprehension of its effect on wage levels.

Appearing before a joint session of the House and Senate labor committees, Green said labor also disliked the measure's "regimentation of labor."

Earlier, General Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the army, had denied the bill was a "draft act" by which men would be picked up on the streets and forced to go to camp whether they wanted to or not.

Lewis Douglas, the budget director, testified that all new public works contracts had been subjected to a "temporary stop order" by the administration to save funds to finance the proposal.

Green cited the proposal to send the men to army posts to support his claim it was a "regimentation of labor" and said he saw no need for that sort of military organization and control.

Asserting that the proposal was "highly objectionable to labor," Green said it "violates the very spirit of voluntarism and freedom of personal action."

Farm Relief Plan Gets Opposition

Washington, March 24 (AP)—Storm signals for the house-approved administration farm relief plan were hoisted today as the senate agriculture committee was called to hear strong demands for revision.

Ready for presentation was a substitute bill which has been drafted by Senator Smith, (D., S. C.), chairman of the committee. In addition, the measure faced scores of amendments, all testifying to the rough sailing to be encountered in the senate.

Senator McNary of Oregon, the Republican leader, gave word that he would demand hearings on the bill. Livestock representatives had arguments ready for eliminating cattle and sheep from the bill's provisions.

Carey Fighting Hard For Life

Mayor Eugene B. Carey appears to be holding his own in his fight for life and had a fairly good night Thursday at the Benedictine Hospital where he was taken on Wednesday. The mayor was removed to the hospital after Dr. Thomas Ordway, Albany blood specialist, had been called into consultation. Dr. John F. Larkin, the physician in attendance on the mayor, is using a serum which Dr. Ordway brought with him in an effort to check the disease.

The Water Board of the village of Ellenville is discussing the possibility of getting state aid on a contemplated $12,000 improvement program.

Kellsboro Jack, Owned By an American, Wins Grand National Race

Winner Was Quoted 25 to 1—Heartbreak Hill, the Favorite, and Dusty Answer Fell and Were Eliminated—Third American Winner.

Aintree, England, March 24 (AP)—For the third time in the history of the classic an American-owned horse galloped home the winner today in the spectacular Grand National Steeplechase as Kellsboro Jack, at 25 to 1, scored a record breaking victory in the colors of Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark, New York social registerite and prominent sportswoman of Long Island and South Carolina.

While disaster overtook the American owned favorite, Heartbreak Hill, as well as Dusty Foot, ridden by George H. (Pete) Bostwick, Kellsboro Jack maintained a leading position virtually all the way and won by three lengths from Really True, long shot owned by a British army officer, Major N. Furlong.

Third palce went to Slater, a neck behind Really True. Slater ran in the colors of George Whitelaw, Briton, who bought the horse recently from the American sportsman, John Hay Whitney, the owner of Dusty Foot.

Fourth among the 17 horses which completed the treacherous four and a half mile jumping course, out of a starting field of 34, was another American-owned entry, J. B. Snow's Delaneige.

The favorites, as usual, had plenty of trouble. Heartbreak Hill, owned by Mrs. C. S. Bird, Jr., of Boston, fell in front of the grand stand after completing the first round of the course. This Irish-bred jumper had gone to the post an 8 to 1 favorite.

Bostwick, the youthful American polo star and brilliant amateur rider, never was able to make much headway with Dusty Foot. This popular combination came a cropper on the first round and was eliminated. Bostwick was unhurt and Dusty Foot was caught by another jockey.

Kellsboro Jack, a seven-year-old, carrying 160 pounds and ridden by David Williams, is by Jackdaw out of Kellsboro Lass. The horse was bought in England by Mrs. Clark, who watched the race with mixed emotions. She is the aunt of "Pete" Bostwick and her husband's entry, Chadd's Ford, was among the finshers.

The victory was worth approximately 13,000 pounds (about $45,000) to the winner's owner.

Kellsboro Jack's time of 9 minutes, 28 seconds, established a new record for the Grand National. The best previous time, 9:32 4-5, was made in 1931 by Grakle.

The only other victories for American-owned horses were scored by Stephen Sanford's Sergeant Murphy in 1923 and A. C. Schwartz's Jack Horner in 1926.

Bostwick, with a slight cut on one side of his face, walked a mile back to the stands after tumbling off his mount at Becher's Brook. He said he turned a couple of somersaults as Dusty Foot went down.

One of the many riderless horses, Apostasy, actually stayed on the course and finished about a length in front of Kellsboro Jack. Apostasy is owned by Lady Lindsay. Dusty Foot broke away from handlers, after throwing Bostwick, and also completed the course riderless, coming in last.

MYSTERIOUS KILLING LAID TO RUM FLEET WAR

Middletown Township, N. J., March 24 (AP)—A gigantic and murderous struggle for control of a rum fleet was seen today as an explanation for the slaying last night of Alexander (Al) Lillien, called a master liquor-runner.

Sudden death by bullets came to Lillien in his Hilltop mansion, a stronghold from which he could peer out over Sandy Hook where rum vessels ply.

A mysterious telephone call to township police sent them dashing up the highlands to the house, once the home of Oscar Hammerstein, opera impressario. On the floor in the big front hallway, sprawled Lillien, three 32 calibre bullet holes through his skull. No one else was in the great house.

Detectives reasoned that the killers drove in an automobile to the front door, rang the bell and shot Lillien dead when he answered it.

Will Permit Beer Ads In Newspapers

Washington, March 24 (AP)—Beer advertisements in newspapers were permitted today for the first time in 13 years.

An interpretation by Attorney General Cummings that "innocent anticipatory" advertisements would bring no prosecution from his department gave brewers their cue to go forward with plans to line up the trade in states where beer may be sold at one minute past midnight April 7.

At the same time, Cummings indicated a passive attitude toward those few papers that hopped to the front yesterday even before his ruling by printing ads banned by the prohibition laws.

Meantime, the nation's capital saw the possibility of catching step with states where beer will be available when 12:01 a. m. is ticked off on April 7.

The senate had awaiting it action on a bill passed by the house yesterday to permit sale of the 3.2 beverage in the district of Columbia. It was hailed in debate as a "model" for state legislatures.

Speaker Rainey interpreted it as permitting sale under the capital dome.

Kiwanis Hears About Shop Work Courses

The how, what and why of the industrial arts courses at Kingston High School was explained to the Kiwanis Club at the Governor Clinton Hotel Thursday noon by Hubert Hoderath, head of that department.

Following the luncheon President Howard R. St. John announced that Mayor Eugene Carey was critically ill at the Benedictine Hospital, and on a motion the sympathy of the club was extended to him in his illness.

It was announced that an inter-club meeting would be held at Beacon next Wednesday evening, several Kingston Kiwanians have places on the program.

Thomas Goodman, in charge of the new golf course planned for use this summer, presented revised plans and a model of the course which will be placed in various store windows so that the public may have the opportunity to see just what the course will be like.

A Kiwanis Chorus composed of William Byrne, the Rev. O. E. Brandorff, N. LeVan Haver, Dr. Gifford, Walter Ostrander, Walter Kidd, R. Frederick Chidsey, Kenneth Kukuk and Robert K. Hancock, rendered "The Mummy Song" under the direction of Paul Zucca, accompanied at the piano by Danny Bittner, which drew a hearty round of applause.

Guests present were Adjutant William N. Wood and Mr. Goodman.

Robert Service of the Kingston High School Faculty introduced the speaker.

Mr. Hoderath divided high school courses into three groups, academic, commercial and industrial arts; the first two courses having a single hour recitation and the latter two hours, until recently when the beginning courses were reduced to one hour that students might take the shop work as an avocation.

The speaker explained the operation of the courses in shop work, the art metal and wood working branches, to which have been added electrical courses.

It was his opinion that the courses were partly exploratory, partly educational and partly avocational, and that the work would uncover special abilities in the students receiving instruction.

Citing cases where a man retired from business was unable to find anything to occupy his mind, Mr. Hoderath stated that in his opinion the ability to use one's hands was one solution to the problem. He told of Calvin Coolidge's happiness in repairing things around his Vermont home, and said, "Even presidents find happiness in using their hands."

Mr. Hoderath said that while the shop work was primarily for those intending to follow that line of endeavor, that a number of students took the beginning courses as an avocation, and that there were courses for part time students as well.

"I believe that the shop is an ideal place for character building," he said, "there the boys have a certain amount of freedom which promotes self control; in the use of tools they must learn cooperation, and by finding out how to make things without detailed instruction they learn self-reliance."

President St. John thanked the speaker, after which the members looked over an exhibit of different kinds of work done in the shops, some of which was interesting, especially with the materials in use. Mr. Hoderath asked the Kiwanians to visit the shops and see the courses in action, and what was being accomplished.

Mitchell Indicted, Evasion of His 1929 Income Tax Charged

New York, March 24 (AP)—Charles E. Mitchell, former chairman of the board of the National City Bank, was indicted by a federal grand jury today on a charge of wilful evasion of his income tax for the year 1929.

The indictment charges that in 1929 Mitchell's net income was $2,823,405.95, whereas he reported a net loss of $48,000, and therefore paid no tax.

He was charged in the indictment with evading payment of a tax of [illegible].

Mitchell resigned the chairmanship of the board of the National City Bank and also of the National City Company and other affiliates of the bank during the period in which he was a witness before the Senate Banking committee in its investigation of the Stock Exchange.

The indictment returned today charged that his income tax for 1929 was erroneous in that he reported a loss from sale of stocks of $1,484,067.53, instead of a profit of $1,388,237.97.

The difference is represented by a loss set up by Mitchell from the sale of 18,300 shares of stock of the National City Bank. The government contends this was not a bona fide sale.

This was the stock which Mitchell testified before the banking committee that he had repurchased from his wife at $212 a share, the price at which he said he sold it to Mrs. Mitchell, although the stock at the time he repurchased it—March 24, 1932—was then selling in the open market at $40 a share.

The indictment contains one count, as there is only one act of evasion charged. The maximum penalty provided for a conviction in such a case is a term of imprisonment for five years and a fine of $10,000, although either imprisonment or fine in any term or amount under the maximum may be imposed at the discretion of the court.

Mitchell, who furnished $10,000 bail earlier in the week, was not in the federal building when the indictment was received by Federal Judge Goddard, nor was his attorney, Max D. Steuer. Medalie said the case would be moved for an early trial.

KUHLMANN BREWERY PREPARES TO REOPEN.

Alterations at the Kuhlmann Brewery here have been underway for the past week, as preparations are being made for the resumption of the brewing of beer just as soon as the state and national law will permit.

Several men are at work now installing machinery and making the necessary arrangements, but it is expected that between 25 and 30 will be employed just as soon as the brewery receives permission to produce beer. A still larger staff of employes is expected to be put on later. Homer Kuhlmann, owner of the brewery, said yesterday.

The widely-known brewery was founded by John Kuhlmann, grandfather of the present owner, in 1858. The business was continued by his son and taken over by Homer Kuhlmann in 1918. Soft drinks were produced there until about two years ago.

The brewery has its own reservoir which provides it with water of the same quality as the famous Sun-Ray water.—Ellenville Journal.

Up to Thursday evening there had been 138 new cases of measles reported in the city, bringing the total number reported since the first of the year up to 796 cases. A majority of these nearly 800 cases, however, have recovered and those who were students have returned to school.

Since the outbreak of the epidemic there have been no serious results reported and the majority of the cases have proven mild.

Lehman's Plan To Control Beer Calls For Commission of Five

Would Set Up County Boards, But Their Recommendations As To The Granting or Revocation of Licenses Could Be Accepted or Rejected By State Board—Would Ban Bars and Brass Rails—Plan Also Contains Local Option Provisions.

State Capitol, Albany, N. Y., March 24 (AP)—Governor Lehman today made public his plan for control of beer in New York through a commission of five, all to be named by the executive bet four to be recommended by the State Bar Association, Medical Society, State Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Labor.

The governor's plan, announced after two conferences with legislative leaders, would set up county boards, but their recommendations as to the granting or revocation of licenses could be accepted or rejected by the state board. Upstate Republicans have demanded that the state board must act on the recommendations of the county units.

The Lehman plan in brief also included:

An objection to bars and brass rails.

Retail sale of beer by groceries and druggists for home consumption, and by hotels, restaurants, beer gardens, clubs, trains and vessels for consumption on the premises.

A tax of $1 a barrel, 50 per cent to be retained by the state and 50 per cent to be returned to the communities.

A provision to prevent brewers from having an interest in retail establishments.

The plan was announced after an all-night conference between the governor and the leaders, which broke up at 2 o'clock this morning and was continued after the whole party had a few hours sleep.

Democrats generally were believed ready to support the plan, which follows to a considerable extent the recommendations of the governor's commission which studied beer and liquor control. The Republicans, however, were understood to be in opposition to the governor's proposal that the licensing power be centered in a state control board. The Republicans favor licensing by county boards.

Governor Lehman's plan is for a commission of five members, to grant licenses to brewers, wholesalers and retailers. The members would be appointed by the governor with the approval of the Senate. The chairman of the board would be selected by the governor alone, but the other four members would be appointed by him from lists of names submitted by the State Bar Association, the State Medical Society, the State Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Labor. If the governor did not approve any of the names submitted he might call for new lists.

The part of the bill which upstate Republicans are understood to disapprove is designed to give the state board the power to name county boards, at its own discretion. The county boards would consist of one member of each of the major political parties. These local boards under the terms of the bill may recommend the granting or revoking of licenses but cannot grant or revoke them of their own accord.

The governor proposes to forbid any brewer to have an interest in a retail establishment selling beer. The bill also provides that only grocery stores and drug stores be allowed to retail beer for consumption off the premises. Consumption on the premises is restricted to hotels, restaurants, beer gardens, clubs, trains and vessels.

Any place losing its license for violation of the law would be unable to renew it for five years.

Governor Lehman proposes a tax of $1 a barrel of 31 gallons, 50 per cent to be retained by the state and 50 per cent returned to the communities on the basis of population.

The bill proposes a salary of $10,000 a year for the chairman of the board and $7,500 for the other four members.

The central control board is given the power to determine the number of licenses for brewers, wholesalers and retailers. Four types of licenses are proposed, for brewers, wholesalers, retailers selling for consumption on the premises and retailers selling for consumption off the premises.

The bill contains local option provisions for towns, cities and villages.

$65,000,000 Outlay on Breweries Reported

New York, March 24 (AP)—L. Seth Schnitman, chief statistician of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, estimated today more than $65,000,000 will be spent in the next few months for new breweries and for alterations and additions to old ones.

The estimate was based on reports from 37 states east of the Rockies, and on statistical calculation for the far western states.

The figure did not include expenditures for building and rehabilitating retail establishments. It covered only a small proportion on the sums to be spent for brewery equipment, and none of the other expenses incidental to starting the brewing industry. The total has been estimated by the United States Brewers Association at $400,000,000.

Schnitman said 170 reports of brewery construction had been received since December 1, covering 37 eastern states. The total for these states was $58,000,000, and he believed another $7,000,000 at least would be required for the western states.

Ten projects to cost about $3,000,000 have been reported from New England. Among them is a $1,000,000 project at Lowell, Mass.; a $500,000 project at Providence, R. I.; two for $300,000 and $200,000 at New Bedford, Mass.; one for $350,000 at Warwick, R. I.; and one for $100,000 at Springfield.

In upstate New York, 12 projects were reported to cost about $2,500,000. Major construction included $1,000,000 for Hudson and $200,000 for Utica.

Shaw Photographs Well, Says His Wife

San Francisco, March 24 (AP)—While George Bernard Shaw faces the limelight, the newsmen and the cameras, Mrs. Shaw, prim but pleasant, keeps somewhat further back than the background.

She accompanied her distinguished playwright husband from the dining salon to their cabin last night as Shaw prepared to go on to the conference with some threescore reporters and photographers.

"You still insist on staying away?" the tall, bearded man said to the slight woman in her dress of quiet wine color, beside him.

"Oh, Absolutely!" she replied. "It doesn't bother you, you know. You go right up there and I'll wait here in the cabin until it's all over."

One cameraman, as they parted, asked Mrs. Shaw to pose for a picture.

"Mr. Shaw photographs very well," she replied with a smile—and closed the cabin door.

Scarlet Fever At City High School

The discovery that four of the pupils at the Kingston High School had been stricken with scarlet fever led Dr. L. E. Sanford, city health officer, to call at the school on Thursday, and make an investigation, checking up on other pupils who had come in contact with those afflicted, and also on all absentees from school.

Dr. Sanford said today that two of the pupils were residents of Kingston and two from out of town.

In order to prevent a spread of the disease Dr. Sanford stated that it was decided to investigate all cases of pupils afflicted with sore throats or other suspicious symptoms.

THE little old buildings that marked the San Diego airport, where Charles Augustus Lindbergh first learned to fly an airplane and prepared for his famous transatlantic flight, have been replaced by buildings of Spanish architecture of the most modern style. The airport now ranks among the most beautiful and best equipped in the United States. Pictured is the field entrance of the administration building.

Men and equipment from the conservation commission at Albany will be on hand to direct and help the boys in the work.

Chicago Lays Over Oil Wealth

Geologists say Chicago is built on a layer of Silurian dolomite 35 feet thick. It is estimated that one square mile of this rock, one foot in depth would yield some 220,000 barrels of oil.

GREECE GETTING CROWDED; BLAMES U. S. QUOTA LAW

Athens, (AP).—The ministry of national economy, noting that Greece has a population of nearly 7,000,000, says the country is becoming overpopulated.

The condition is ascribed to effects of the American quota act of 1921 plus the influx of 1,200,000 Greek refugees from Asia Minor as a result of the post-war exchange of nationals between this country and Turkey.

Before 1921 about 26,396 Greeks went to the United States annually. The original quota act cut this to [illegible] but since then that allowance virtually has been wiped out.

REVERSE INCOME TAX PAID BY ITALY'S BOSSES

Rome (AP).—The employer rather than the worker has cause to regret taxation on the latter's wages, under a decree just issued by Mussolini.

It orders that pay of less than $1,500 be increased to cover from 40 to 80 per cent of the tax, the object being to aid families of modest means.

Where the wage is less than $300 a year an 80 per cent increase is prescribed. For earnings up to $900 it is 50 per cent and above that figure it amounts to 40 per cent.

FOREIGN BREWS HOLD NO CHARM FOR BRITISH PALATES

London. (AP).—Britain prefers her own beer to the foreign product, according to figures revealed in parliament.

In the year ending September 30, 1932, about 18,345,000 barrels of beer were brewed in Great Britain and Northern Ireland, while 1,313,413 barrels were imported for all of 1932.

Proof gallons of spirit distilled in Britain in the 12 months totaled 33,062,000.

CITIZENSHIP CARDS COSTLY FOR GRANDEES OF SPAIN

Madrid, (AP).—The Duke of Alba, famed as holder of the most Spanish titles under the monarchy, will pay 22,500 pesetas, or $1,875, this year for his card of identity as a citizen of the republic.

The price of these cards is based on a sliding scale according to income. Under the monarchy there was a limit of $50 for men and $40 for women. But citizens of the republic pay out on the basis of what they take in.

The rate is only about 2 cents for laborers, but leaps on large incomes with special charges against elaborate palaces.

MAYOR HERRIOT CREATES JOBS IN ROMAN ARENA

Lyons, France. (AP). — Erudite Edouard Herriot, ex-premier but still mayor of this silk-city, is using an archaeological find to combat unemployment.

Up on Fourviere hill there has been discovered a Roman amphitheatre, dating from the days when Lyons was known as Lugdunum.

In order to restore the arena to something resembling its ancient symmetry, Mayor Herriot has created a number of jobs for workless fellow-citizens.

The Chesterfield FORMULA—what is it?

The formulas and processes which make Chesterfield a milder and better-tasting cigarette are secret—to prevent others from copying them

If every person knew the method and processes of tanning leather, it would be of interest; but what people want to know is: Is it a good shoe? Is it comfortable? Will it wear longer? Is the price right?

So it is with Chesterfield Cigarettes. If smokers, men and women, knew all of the formulas and processes of manufacture, it would be of interest to them, but what smokers really want is the result.

Everything that goes into Chesterfield Cigarettes is as good as money can buy.

Every process has in it all that science knows about cigarette manufacture.

The formulas are secret to prevent others from copying them. The mildness and the better taste you may prove for yourself. May we ask you to try Chesterfields?

Lights of NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

They have just told me another story concerning balloonists. Some army men were making a cross-country flight in a free balloon. These balloons travel only, of course, in the direction of and at the speed of the wind. Momentarily becalmed above a farmer working in a field, they called to him to catch the guide rope, wishing to ask him some questions about their location. The farmer was amazed to find that he actually could pull such a large balloon earthward so fine was the balance in the still air. He not only caught the rope, but proceeded to wind it several times around his waist. The warning shouts from above came all too late. A gust of wind caught the balloon, the rope lifted the farmer off the ground, spun him like a top, and dropped him on what fortunately was soft ground. The army men hastily unshipped some ballast and went away from there. They knew the man would think they had played a trick on him.

Oswald Nelson, known as "Ozzie," was born in New York and educated at Rutgers. There he was quarterback on the football team, welterweight boxing champion, and a crack swimmer. He also was art editor of the college paper and actually sold some cartoons to outside magazines. Later, he graduated from the New Jersey Law school. Having thus prepared himself for a career, he is now twenty-seven years old and an orchestra leader in a New York hotel.

Joseph T. Higgins, former assemblyman and now the thirty-eight-year-old sheriff of New York county, doesn't look his age. He still is as slender and boyish looking as when, shortly after he attended Holy Cross and while studying law at Fordham, he was one of the best middle distance runners of the New York Athletic club. Twice, indoors, he beat Ted Meredith and once, outdoors, he defeated Joie Ray. No wonder that when he ran for office he finished ahead.

It has probably been printed, but I like the story of the generous-hearted New Yorker who met the hungry man. Instead of offering him alms, he took him into a restaurant and ordered food. To make his guest less self-conscious, he even ordered a cup of coffee for himself, although he had recently risen from the breakfast table. All went well until, to his horror and dismay, he discovered that in changing his suit that morning he had left all his money at home. He started to explain to the waiter, but the hungry man interrupted.

"That's all right," he said. "I'll pay the check." And producing a dollar from his worn habiliments, he did so. One can now get a lot of food in New York for a dollar. When they got outside, the would-be benefactor stammered:

"My dear fellow, that was most embarrassing, but we'll get a taxicab, drive to my office, and I'll get some cash and square myself with you."

"No," replied the former hungry man. "It's all right about the breakfast, but I'm doggoned if I'm going to be stuck for the taxi."

Some of the best New York stories center around Oliver Herford. There is one that has been connected with many persons, but it really belongs to the slender, gray, soft-spoken wit of the Players. The clubs champion bore rushed up to Mr. Herford in great agitation.

"I have been grossly insulted," he complained. "That fellow over there said he'd give me $100 if I resign."

"Don't you do it, my dear chap," said Mr. Herford earnestly. "I am sure you will get many better offers."

The Despised Onion

In Spain and Portugal the onion forms one of the most universal articles of diet. In addition to the peculiar flavor which recommends this vegetable, it is remarkably nutritious, ranking with the grains in regard to the quantity of gluten it contains. As the English laborer has found by long experience that a bit of cheese with his bread helps to sustain his strength, so the Spaniard adds to his crust of bread an onion.

When Senators Are Paired

When a senator wishes to be absent when the vote is taken on a bill but wishes to have his vote counted, he arranges with a senator who will vote the other way to "pair" their votes, one canceling the other. The paired senators need not be from the same state.

NEW FROCKS SHOW MODE OF ELEGANCE

Restrained Slender Lines Feature New Garb.

A mode of elegance for gentlewomen marks the latest clothes collection shown by an American designer prominent in the Paris fashion world.

Sleek, slim black crepe frocks, given a flash of brilliance by metal belts or touches of bright color, simple dark ensembles with three-quarter coats and evening frocks of dull surfaced crepe in exotic cyclamen hues distinguish the collection.

Restrained slender lines, natural waistlines and plain sleeves are shown in the frocks designed for daytime wear. The dash of metal or color used in their trims are another distinguishing feature.

One plain frock of heavy black marocain has a narrow belt and a vee outlined on the bodice in gold, black and white braid; another has a narrow belt of red suede to match the accompanying red coat, while a third is accented by a fichu scarf lined with cyclamen pink crepe.

GRAY AND WHITE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

It's a perennial, is this interest which the world of fashion holds for prints. At the dawn of each new season fashion-loving women are ever alert in seeking "what's new" in prints. Just now the message is carried across via materials which print either all-white on gray grounds or perhaps black or yellow or navy and sometimes brown on gray. So, if you want to acquaint yourself with the "last word" in prints ask to be shown those which are patterned on gray backgrounds. You can see from the picture how very attractive the white-on-gray effects are. And have you seen the new etched prints? They are irresistible. The grounds are apt to be navy or black, brown, red or any dark color. The motif or allover patterning, perhaps of fruit, or big leaves or huge flowers with foliage looks as if it had been traced or outlined or etched with a fine pen dipped in white ink—no solid masses but simply an outline drawing in effect.

FLASHES FROM PARIS

Couturiers are decidedly in a mood for satin.

Interest in costume jewelry is being revived.

Designers declare elegance with rich weaves.

Gloves made of dress fabrics sound note of new interest.

Prints with gay backgrounds make new appeal for spring.

Some of the newer satins resemble supple patent leather.

Navy crinkled crepes are featured for dresses and afternoon suits.

Little jackets of novelty taffeta will top spring and summer frocks.

Coral Red Parisienne's Choice for Spring Hats

Red has played so important a part in millinery during the winter as the choice of the smart Parisienne it is not surprising that this color should be carried over into spring.

In the first millinery import collections to reach this country, coral red is strongly featured. It appears in new braids and straws, in antelope and in various types of trimmings. It may be an entire hat or just the merest touch in a single flower. This coral red is a warm yellow-red which will be harmonious with navy blue, yellow beige, gray or black costumes and may be related to accessories.

Felt Beret and Bag

A felt beret with two saucy tassels nodding from its peak and a large envelope handbag of the same material forms a unique set. The beret can be slipped inside the handbag when not in use. These sets come in blue, wine, black and brown, and they're surprisingly inexpensive.

Lightning Proof

A modern steel office building and a steel ship are practically lightning proof. It is safer in a house than outdoors. Caves and caverns and ditches are comparatively safe. Places to avoid are high ground, isolated trees, the edges of woods, wire fences, etc.

Plan To Begin Bridge At Catskill on July 1

Preparations made at Albany and Washington Thursday paved the way for the start of construction of the Rip Van Winkle bridge at Catskill by July 1. Harvey O. Schermerhorn, bridge engineer of the State Department of Public Works, had his staff whipping into shape final specifications for the $3,466,000 structure so he could present them to the Reconstruction Finance Corp. next Monday.

Previously the R. F. C. directors announced formal authorization of the loan for the bridge project, after receiving certified copies of the law signed by Governor Lehman amending the original Hudson River Bridge Authority Act to comply with federal technicalities.

Secretary of the Treasury Woodin placed the interest rate for the bridge loan at 4½ per cent, rather than the 5 per cent rate set last November, when the Catskill bridge first was included on the relief program.

The bridge undertaking, for which the R. F. C. will take over $3,400,000 of bonds of the Bridge Authority, will provide a crossing of the Hudson river midway between Poughkeepsie and Albany. Including the employment of men in mills and shops providing materials for the project, it is expected to provide jobs for 759 men for about 18 months.

The bridge will extend 4,822 feet from abutment to abutment, according to specifications, which require, among other things, 12,900 tons of steel, 35,000 cubic yards of concrete and 1,700 cubic yards of stone masonry.

The contract will be advertised four weeks. If approval of Mr. Schermerhorn's plans is given next week, the contract could be let by the first of June and actual operations begun within a month.

In the financing arrangement, the state comptroller will buy $290,000 of the Bridge Authority bonds to pay off Ulster and Dutchess counties for rights of way on the mid-Hudson bridge at Poughkeepsie.

The name for the bridge has been selected by Col. Frederick Stuart Greene, state superintendent of public works, and Capt. Arthur S. Brandt, head of the Highway Division to be in keeping with the policy of identifying highways with local history of the regions which traverse. The Rip Van Winkle bridge thus would be a continuation of the Rip Van Winkle Trail, which begins at Catskill and winds through the section made famous by Washington Irving's lore.

STEPS TO PEACE

When the Great War broke out in a startled world in 1914, very few people believed it could last long or be very serious. Some militarists and diplomats and a few far-seeing students of world conditions were the only ones who had been expecting anything of the sort or believed such a war possible.

Today there is a great amount of war talk. Every newspaper reader who is able to get his mind off his own immediate problems is aware of the fact that there is real danger of another outbreak of war, possibly on a more terrible scale than before, in Europe today. Every reader knows that rulers and commissions and diplomats are conferring with each other earnestly in an effort to stop this war before it begins. There is hope of success in the very fact that the general public is informed of their problem and their activities.

"It may do the world good to be scared a little," said Walter Lippmann in a recent interview. "It will be salutary if the public is apprehensive about the possibilities of war soon enough to take such steps as should be taken." In the past, rulers and diplomats too often have failed to get at the fundamental causes of war. They made agreements with each other about this or that phase without having the courage to take "such steps as should be taken." Those "steps" today involve treaty and territorial revisions, debt settlements and other fundamental corrections which require bold and unselfish action. May the negotiaters have the nerve and the will and popular support to take them.

PROSPERITY UNEMPLOYMENT.

Employment figures for January and February show slight gains in many places, some of them rather unexpected. In England, for example, where unemployment has been considered chronic, there was a gain of more than 60,000 workers in January this year over January a year ago, with another slight gain in February over January. Even Germany, with all its troubles, reports a little rise in employment. In the United States there were advances in some regions.

All the gains are slight, compared with total unemployment. The problem remains one of the largest and most important to be dealt with. As the buying tendency revealed in the last few days begins to make itself felt all along the line, there will be more and more jobs opening up. But that is not the whole story.

Even in the days of our greatest apparent prosperity, there was an unemployment problem. There were observers who said it was gaining on us, little by little. Much of it was caused by maladjustments in industry. People naturally adapted to only one sort of work never made connection with it. People shoved out of jobs by improved machinery were not re-absorbed in other work as they should have been under wise direction. As the upswing comes now, such mistakes of the past must be avoided.

COMMON HONESTY.

About every so often hard-headed folks, who face facts and have no illusions about human nature, wake up with a start at the discovery that people are honest. There is probably not a community in America which has not been rediscovering this remarkable fact during the recent unpleasantness. With the strongest temptation to cheat the other fellow that has appeared in many years, people have shown that they wanted to pay, and would pay.

A good example is a theatre in one of the big cities which, during the bank holiday, accepted patrons' bank checks for admission tickets. Those checks, naturally, came nearly all from strangers. The manager has reported since that whereas he expected only about 10 per cent of them to be paid, he "hasn't had one check bounce back." People, he concludes, are "absolutely honest in these things."

A similar experience is reported by a hotel manager who, finding traveling salesmen and other business men caught without cash in the successional closing of banks, and with no means of getting it from home, gave them credit for their meals and lodging and lent them money for cigars and theatre tickets. He hasn't lost any of that money, he says. And he has gained a lot of valuable good will.

* * *

From the news story telling about the process of re-organization of two large banks one learns that under the new regime there will be "fewer vice presidents, assistant vice presidents and other executive officers. A small group of men is expected to control all the affairs of the banks. Directorates will not be passed out to industries that deposit large accounts." That will be a real reform, from the standpoint of economy and efficiency alike. Over-organization of that sort is one of the things wrong with banking. It has been so widely recognized that jokes about the number of bank vice-presidents and their general uselessness have become commonplace in humor magazines and vaudeville and radio jesting. That banking wisdom and soundness did not increase in direct ratio with the number of vice-presidents and directors is quite evident now.

THE X-RAY TREATMENT.

Notwithstanding the great skill of our surgeons which has now enabled patients with severe goitre to undergo operation in their own city or town, there are still a great number of patients where operation would be unsafe.

There are also a large number who naturally dread or fear operation.

What about other methods of reducing the size of the thyroid gland, the enlargement of which is the cause of the usual symptoms—fast heart, nervousness, trembling, and digestive disturbances?

The other methods are the X-ray and radium.

Dr. A. H. Williams, Grand Rapids, Michigan, from a study of 200 cases is convinced of the value of the X-ray treatment. In these cases there was an average of 10 treatments over a period of 3½ months. The dose was repeated weekly or at 10 day intervals.

What were the results?

The average drop in the pulse rate was 24 beats to the minute which is a great improvement. This must have been very reassuring when we remember how the very fast heart rate in severe goitre alarms the patient.

The average gain in weight was eight pounds,—which would show that the digestive disturbances were greatly lessened.

The rate at which the body processes worked was lowered by 23 points. There was that much less work done by the body thus saving much strength and energy.

Of the 200 cases, 161, or about 81 per cent were definitely cured, 27 cases or about 13 per cent were improved, making a total of 188 or 94 per cent either cured or improved. In eight cases, or 4 per cent, the symptoms returned after one year, five of which were later re-treated and cured. Two cases developed symptoms due to lack of thyroid juice and one case showed blood vessel disturbances.

It must be admitted that this is a very favorable record of cases as treated by the X-ray.

However it must be remembered that the treatment by the X-ray must be in the hands of specialists who are just as skilful at their work as the surgeon is with the knife.

It is always advisable wherever possible to give the patient a prolonged rest before treatment by surgery, X-ray or radium.

Difference in Human Beings

If one searches for fundamental differences in human beings, the first classification which occurs to one is that into kindly and unkindly persons. It will be found that one who properly may be placed in the unkindly group seldom if ever instinctively likes one who rightly goes into the kindly classification.

VALIANT DUST

by Percival Christopher Wren Author of "BEAU GESTE"

SYNOPSIS: At sea in the whirlpool of intrigue that fills the ancient citadel of Mekazzen, Margaret Maligni is taken to see her childhood sweetheart, Otho Bellême, lying bound and wounded. He has been betrayed by Riccoli, son of the Kaid of Mekazzen, and by Jules Maligni, Margaret's husband. Riccoli has threatened Otho, private in the Foreign Legion, and Margaret as well. Jules is no protection. In desperation Margaret remembers Colonel Le Sage of the French Secret Service, who is trying to unravel the intrigues of Mekazzen.

Chapter 41

A NEW MISUNDERSTANDING

RISING from the cushioned mattress that served him indifferently as arm-chair, couch and bed, Colonel Le Sage strode to the heavy iron-plated door of his room.

That wasn't Major Langeac's knock, but it was the knock all right.

Warily opening the door, Le Sage saw a Moorish woman, or rather a cloak which presumably concealed a Moorish woman, for no face was visible.

"Yelverbury?" he inquired in a whisper.

"It's I, Margaret," she whispered in reply, as she slipped into the room, and Le Sage locked the door.

"Oh, I am in such trouble, Colonel Le Sage. I've come to you for help. You will help me, won't you?"

"What is it?" asked Colonel Le Sage. A little coldly, Margaret thought.

Could it be that he was another of those people who promise everything and perform nothing? Had he cultivated her solely for his own ends, or for her possible usefulness to him.

"You will help me?" she asked him urgently, seizing his arm.

"What is it?" again asked Colonel Le Sage.

Yes. Definitely unenthusiastic.

He had been very different from this when it had been a question of her being useful to him.

"I did my best to help you, Colonel Le Sage. And I'll help all I can. I'll do anything you ask, if only you'll help me now, just this once."

Margaret fought back her tears—tears of pain, misery and disappointment. Was there no one in the world she could trust—except Otho? And yet she had felt such confidence in this man. An instinctive liking and trust.

What was he saying about Yelverbury? Why talk about that now?

"Oh, Colonel Le Sage, do listen to me and help me. My oldest and dearest friend is . . ."

"One moment, Mrs. Maligni. You must answer my question before we go any further. I must know where I am."

"Oh, Colonel Le Sage, I trusted . . ."

"Yes, Mrs. Maligni. And I trusted you absolutely, although it's not my custom. Now, tell me why didn't you give me the pass-word when you came to my door? And when you've told me that, just tell me where you got it."

"I don't understand, Colonel Le Sage."

"You don't? At the end of our talk together, you suddenly shot it at me, and I admit you made me feel something of a fool. What was the idea exactly, Mrs. Maligni, in concealing the fact that you knew all the time who I was?"

"But I didn't . . . I . . ."

"And I wonder how the devil your husband got hold of it. And I'd have sworn that that légionnaire lad was honest, too straight, too fine. I suppose he gave me and the pass-word away to Riccoli, and Riccoli told it to the Malignis, and Jules Maligni told you."

"Told me what?" cried the bewildered Margaret.

"Look here, Mrs. Maligni. There's the small matter of my life at stake, and you can believe me when I say that it is a very small matter in comparison with my success. That is an enormous matter, and I stick at absolutely nothing when I am working for my country.

"How long have you known who I am? Who else beside your husband and his father know who I am? And who was it told you a pass-word that I'd have sworn only I and one other man ever knew? It's important.

"Was it your noble husband, or was it Riccoli himself?"

"Colonel Le Sage, what are you talking about? What has happened since I saw you last? My husband told me you were a German Secret Service officer, Carl von Mittengen, masquerading as Herr Schlacht, and hoping to get something out of the Kaid. I never dreamt you were anything else until you told me so, the last time I saw you.

"As for the pass-word you are talking about — nobody has ever told me any pass-word, neither my husband nor Major Riccoli, and I know nothing whatever about it."

Colonel Le Sage stared hard into Margaret's eyes, which met his unwaveringly, unflinchingly.

Suddenly he spoke.

"Tell me this, then," he snapped. "Where did you get this word 'Yelverbury'? Why did you say it to me?"

"Where did I get it? I was born there. Why did I say it to you? Because you asked me where my home was. Yelverbury's my home. What are you talking about?"

It was too much. Margaret burst into tears.

Colonel Le Sage put his arm about the trembling, shaking, sobbing figure.

"Margaret," he said kindly, "tell me just one thing, and I'll never doubt you again. Not for a moment. Tell me someone else who lives, or lived, at your Yelverbury."

"My father, Dr. Maykings," sobbed Margaret. "My mother, my brother Jack, my husband was at school there . . ."

"Yes? Anyone else?"

"The Reverend Henry Hoaine was the Vicar. His son used to play with us."

"Yes. And who was your big man?"

"Sir Robert Mandeville Bellême."

"Ah! And his son?"

"Oh, Colonel Le Sage, Otho. It is about Otho I have come to you. He joined the Foreign Legion. He is here."

"Good God," whispered Le Sage, and in his relief put the other arm also about Margaret and hugged her.

She had been telling the truth. All was well.

"I beg your pardon, my dear child. Forgive me," he said. "Now tell me what the trouble is."

• • • • • • •

"Well, we've got to do something, Bob, to the swine that had you decoyed and beaten. We're simply got to show the hound that he . . ."

An Arab, who had sauntered toward the group of légionnaires, stood eyeing them in vacant, open-mouthed wonder.

"Oi, bung off, Budoo. I ain't got no coppers, an' you ain't got no monkey," advised Sailor Harris.

But the big Arab, instead of obeying the advice of Sailor Harris, appeared to be galvanized into sudden life, activity and intelligence, as Otho, removing his face from his hands, looked up to see who might be the object of Sailor Harris's admonition.

Striding forward, the Arab seized the astonished Otho by the arm.

"Yelverbury!" said he.

"Listen," he continued, speaking English. "Follow me without appearing to do so. Don't keep too close, I mean."

Otho obeyed.

"Now then, Otho Bellême," said Colonel Le Sage, as he locked the door of his room.

"Tell me. Are those three English friends of yours staunch and loyal?"

"Absolutely, sir."

"And if I told them to obey you, and to follow you, in any undertaking, would they do so?"

"Absolutely, sir."

"Good. Now for how many others can you answer in your section? I mean, as being staunch and loyal, and entirely uncorrupted by—er—Sergeant-Major Vittorelli."

"Three, for certain. Two old soldiers of France, and a very fine Russian who was Regimental Sergeant-Major of a guard regiment."

"Good. Now listen. I want you and your three compatriots to come to this room after roll-call tonight. Parade dress, rifles, bayonets."

"Sergeant-Major Vittorelli would . . ." began Otho.

"Sergeant-Major Vittorelli will—er—be elsewhere," replied Le Sage.

"Simply bring your three men here, telling them that now they really can do something helpful and useful in the matter of—er—shall we say Margaret of Yelverbury?"

And Colonel Le Sage laughed.

"Sir?" ejaculated the startled Otho.

"Oh yes. Mrs. Maligni and I are old friends. She is helping me, and I, her. If all goes well tonight, she'll be safely out of this place quite soon."

Rising, Colonel Le Sage strode to the door, and after suddenly opening it, glanced to right and left along the dim-lit stone tunnel-like passage.

"Good," said he, placing a kindly hand on Otho's shoulder. "Your chance—and mine—comes tonight. Good luck, Bellême."

(Read Psalm 37:1-6.)

The Wrong Kind of Fretting.

One can sympathize with the Psalmist. According to all the rules of morality the ungodly ought not to prosper. Actually they do and their apparent success is sadly perplexing. It has first and last fretted really good people and even made them envious.

The Psalm forbids such fretting. It does not ask us to blunt our sense of sin or have no concern for or about evil doers. Someone must have a great deal of concern both for and about them and their deeds. It does ask us to trust God's moral order and to weigh the consequences of right and wrong in their own proper scales. Character is God's appointed reward for goodness and time is always on the side of the good. Lawless prosperity does, sooner or later, wither; the wage of goodness is imperishable. Trust in the Lord and do right and life will have at the heart of it a strength and peace which are His supreme rewards.

Prayer: Save us, we beseech Thee, O Lord of the just and unfailing, from envy of the prosperous and from any fretting distrust of goodness. Establish us in the great confidences, correct our heart's desires to the end that we may ask of Thee the peace of a good conscience and the joy of well-doing and, leaving all the rest to Thee, go on with an inner quietness and an assurance of Thy loving forever. In His name who made the Eternal His delight. Amen.

Seagoing steamers ply between ports that lie above the clouds on the South American lake, Titicaca, which is more than 12,000 feet above the sea. The lake, highest navigable body of water in the world, is located between Peru and Bolivia in the Andes. The steamers that sail on it were built in England, and although they crossed the Atlantic, they never sailed it—for they were knocked down and shipped in parts. From the ocean port into the mountain-bound inland lake in the Andes, the parts were borne on the backs of Indians.

The lake is dotted with the sacred islands of the sun and moon where, according to Inca legend, the now lost Empire of the Incas was founded. The lake itself is as strange as the legend that surrounds it.

Its cold deep waters hover at the freezing point, but never freeze. The lake has both fresh and salt waters—fresh where it runs deep, and salt where fast evaporation has made shallow water brackish.

Early Greek literature was written as poetry. It grew from the hymns, war-songs and dirges brought into the land by the Achaioi about 1500 B.C. Homer's Iliad and Odyssey, written about 950 B.C., were in metre. The first use of prose as a literary medium is found among the philosophers and professional speech writers, whose work was later.

LAKE KATRINE GRANGE MEETING HELD MONDAY

Lake Katrine, March 24—On Monday evening, March 20, the regular meeting of the Grange was held in the hall. There were 37 sisters and 16 brothers present. The officers reported absent were overseer, chaplain, gate keeper and Pomona. The meeting was opened in due form promptly at 8 o'clock with Worthy Master Hookey presiding.

Brother Parish announced that he was unable to purchase the same card tables as he purchased last year and was granted permission to purchase whatever he thought best.

Sister Lachmann announced that it was necessary to solicit pies for the dinner Thursday at the hall and asked the members of the P.-T. A. to furnish the necessary amount if possible.

Letters of thanks for flowers were received from Sisters Goldie Everett, Katherine Roosa and Margaret Munson. All were very happy to see these members present.

Announcement was made that on or about March 31 a Grange cleanup day would be held. This day has already been tried earlier in the month but proved unsuccessful. However, the members feel that if they wait for more agreeable weather they would be able to accomplish more along this line of work. The women have also offered their assistance in cleaning up the Grange.

Sister D. Hendricks was elected delegate to Pomona.

Brother Pratt Boice was elected as chaplain and Sister D. Hendricks as Pomona, in the places of Sister L. Christian and Brother E. Christian who have moved away.

The literary program was in charge of Sister Kieffer, chairman of the service and hospitality committee.

Song by the Grange, "The Little Brown Church in the Vale."

Sister Kukuk gave an interesting report as delegate to the State Grange in Geneva.

A reading by Sister N. Parish.

A solo by Brother Hookey, "A Little Bit of Heaven" and "What an Irishman Means by Machree."

A talk by Brother Pratt Boice about the different bills brought up on milk as a public utility proved very interesting to all.

Singing by the Grange led by Master Hookey, "Three Blind Mice."

A cracker eating contest held between the brothers and sisters to see who could eat the crackers the quickest and then whistle. This was won by Sister and Brother D. Parish.

Song by the Grange, "The Wearing of the Green."

After the close of the meeting delicious refreshments consisting of ham sandwiches, cake and coffee were enjoyed by all. A goodly number of the younger members went upstairs to dance to the music being played over the radio, which is proving to be a success in drawing the interest of the younger folks.

Fashions by Eleanor Gunn

Gray Outlook For Spring But Not a Dreary One

New York.—There are two schools of fabrics—one sponsoring the wooly and the other the slick and smooth variety. Here is a coat made of a mannish twill tan too—but it certainly has gone completely feminine under the hands of the tailor.

Just as one is impressed by fashion reports to the effect that fashion is well balanced this season, that both sides of a costume must match, along comes a delightful contradiction to upset our ideas on the subject. After all, does it matter whether one keeps one's balance in little things? This coat is certainly way off side, yet it has good lines and is surely a worthy model.

We have been led to expect a great deal of gray, grege and beige this spring. Any of these shades are good coat colors, unless, of course, one must wear one's coat more or less constantly, in which case, some of the lighter shades present difficulties. There are enough gray coats to warrant discussing them both as a separate unit and as an ensemble possibility. How about a gray coat over a bright dress, shall we say blue or purple? How about a gray coat over prints, in which there is some harmonizing tone? Gray with white is often very chic and gray with black always is. Your Parisienne has a way of appearing in gray and brown and while it may sound dull, it is quite the reverse.

If you are wondering about a fur trimming for your gray or grege or beige ensemble, you must not overlook the possibilities of choosing monkey, which is either in fashion or decidedly out and at the moment happens to be in. It's a good spring choice, not running to warmth. Monkey, in fact, is more of a fringe than anything else and in this year of fringes has its place—usually on the edge of cape. It seems to delight designers to use monkey on white or some pale shade, which brings its glossy blackness into bold relief.

Chiffon dinner dresses, white especially, are very chic when accented by such a bit of monkey-shine.

COAT OF TAN TOWN VARIETY

DID YOU KNOW THAT

A Talbot beret, with ruche and gloves of navy blue organdie, covered with tiny white blossoms is a success.

For the older woman atention is called to feather trimmings, bands with tassels, bands with high back wings, flat feather appliques and quill effects.

Both importers and domestic silk houses are now giving considerable attention to field flower prints for summer wear.

Orangy casts of red are high-lighted, especially the shades endorsed by Vionnet, Lanvin and Mainbocher. These reds are destined to be used mostly in combinations with navy blue, black or gray.

Rustle 'For the Coat as Well at the Frock

Taffeta has gradually been impressing itself on the consciousness of the fashion world and has crept into the designing of coats in the pleasantest kind of way—for linings and trimming. The crisp material is especially attractive, used with the soft smooth wool crepes, semi-sheer in texture so they can stand a lining with considerable body.

In this manner it is also well adapted to the sleeve, full at the wrist, that may be turned up to the three-quarter line. Scarfs of the material need not be separate, but are also shown in matching color as an integral part of the coat, or if detachable, are of dead white against a navy or black woolen. A favorite type is short and full, with pleated borders.

Cleveland Aspired to Be Capital

In August, 1860, a Cleveland (Ohio) newspaper urged that the capital be removed to that city because "when Canada, Nova Scotia, Greenland and the rest of the continent become a part of the great confederacy of the United States, Cleveland will be the center of the four corners of population and empire."

WHITE HOUSE AGAIN SEES KIDS AT PLAY

Grandchildren of Roosevelt Make Things Lively.

Washington.—The ring of child laughter through the White House, heard but seldom since the departure of the family of Theodore Roosevelt many years ago, again will resound as another Roosevelt settles down to residence there for four years.

Although the Franklin D. Roosevelt children are grown, the youngest being nearly eighteen, grandsons and granddaughters can be counted on to furnish much "copy" of the kind that convulsed the nation when their distant cousins occupied the limelight.

Three of President and Mrs. Roosevelt's children are married. All of them are rearing families.

Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, the blond daughter, who will spend a great deal of her time at the White House, has two children, a girl and a boy.

James Roosevelt, who married Betsy Cushing of Boston, is the father of Sara Delano Roosevelt.

Elliott Roosevelt, whose wife was Elizabeth Donner of Philadelphia, is the father of William Donner Roosevelt, better known to the family as "Young Bill."

Two Still Infants.

The Dall children will be the only ones who will be able to romp and play for some time to come as the other two are still in the baby stage.

Of the former, there is Anna Eleanor, known to everyone as "sistie." The boy, Curtis Roosevelt Dall, is best known as "Buzzie."

They are nicknames that grew out of the pronunciation of each others names by the little sister and brother.

Sistie and Buzzie are frequent visitors at Hyde Park and to the Roosevelt home in New York city.

Little Anna Eleanor, who resembles her mother, already is showing a fondness for outdoor sports so characteristic of the Roosevelts. At five and a half she rides a saddle pony very well. She also is showing great aptitude for swimming.

Sara Delano Roosevelt, the daughter of James and Betsy, was named for her great-grandmother, the mother of the President.

William Donner Roosevelt is two months old.

Two of the children of President and Mrs. Roosevelt will make the White House their permanent home. They are John and Franklin, Jr., both of them students at Groton school in Massachusetts where the latter, like his father, played on the football team. He will enter college in the fall.

Both of the younger sons are extremely popular and much sought after for social affairs in which the younger set participates. They are devoted to outdoor sports.

Only occasionally did childish laughter—and sobs—reverberate through the White House during the regime of President Hoover.

The infrequent visits of his three grandchildren, sons of Herbert Hoover, Jr., were all too infrequent as far as the President was concerned.

Other Roosevelts Recalled.

The White House was a particularly lively spot during the regime of President Theodore Roosevelt and the six youngsters who moved in with him. Alice, Theodore, and Kermit were beginning to feel grown up when their father took office. His other children, Archie and Quentin, however, were young enough to embarrass their father, frighten their mother, and lead White House servants a merry chase.

Thomas Lincoln, eight-year-old "Tad" when his martyred father became President, ran them a close second. "Tad" wore an army uniform, drilled the White House servants, and waxed wrathy when they didn't do squads right to suit him.

Other White House children who have stood out in the nation's memory include:

Mary Donelson, the grandchild whom Andrew Jackson called "the sunshine of the White House."

Esther Cleveland, one of the few children born in the White House.

Susanna Adams, the first to play in the executive mansion.

Charlie Taft, who took a copy of "Treasure Island" to his father's inauguration so he would not be bored if the President's first speech happened to be dull.

Thick Fog Costs London $5,000,000 Each Day

London.—It costs London $5,000,000 every day a thick fog descends on the city.

This is the estimate the London Chamber of Commerce places on the losses involved by damage to merchandise, delays in traffic, suspension of business, cost of artificial lighting and illness.

This financial loss is accompanied by a rise in the death rate of one-sixth.

And it appears that the city may continue to sustain the loss for many years to come. For although scientists know the cause of the fogs they have so far been unable to find a workable method for abolishing them.

Buckeye State Almost Forgets Favorite Tree

Columbus, Ohio.—The Buckeye state almost forgot its favorite tree in landscaping at its new $6,000,000 office building here. The landscaping force discovered that no provision had been made in the plans for buckeye trees. Two were hastily provided

POULTRY FACTS

POULTRY BUSINESS HARD TO COUNT ON

Producers Should Not Grow Too Optimistic.

By R. R. ALP, Poultry Extension Specialist, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois—WNU Service.

Just as some poultrymen were too pessimistic a year ago, some of them may be too optimistic now. Prospective flock owners should not get over enthusiastic on the basis of profitable egg prices during the last months of 1932.

Poultry and eggs bring in more than 11 per cent of the millions in Illinois cash farm income, which explains why good egg prices should be hailed with optimism. However, there is little reason why flock owners as a group should adopt a general expansion program. Undoubtedly, for some an increase in size of flock, buildings and equipment would be justifiable. However, any marked increase in the poultry business should depend largely upon the availability of a good market, other farm activities, the experiences of the operator and the relative importance of poultry to other farm enterprises within the area.

Probably the best plan for most people during the year would be to follow a normal procedure and do the best possible. The "in and outer" has seldom made money. What poultry prices will do during the coming year is problematical.

Any wild optimism at this time would be as foolish as the loose thinking and foolish pessimism of a year ago. At that time egg prices in February, March, April, May and June caused many people to become unwisely discouraged. They decided to quit their interest in poultry and drift along. Consequently, when egg prices reached the profitable level, only those flock owners who had maintained their interest were prepared to take advantage of the situation.

Blood-Tested and Culled Flocks for Best Chicks

The most important question before the poultryman is where and what kind of baby chicks to buy, says C. F. Parrish, poultry extension specialist at North Carolina State college. "I am convinced, however, that the safe plan for the poultryman is to get his new chicks from hatcheries where the eggs used come from blood-tested and culled supply flocks."

Mr. Parrish says his reason for making this recommendation comes from certain tests which have been made. Reports on 79,686 chicks produced by hatcheries where the eggs were produced by blood-tested birds show 5,151 chicks died from all causes during the first four weeks of life. This is a mortality of 6.4 per cent.

Reports on 7,958 chicks produced from birds that had not been blood-tested show that 2,875 died from all causes during the first four weeks of life. This is a mortality of 36.1 per cent.

Keeping the Male Birds

Farm management experts and agricultural economists have commonly insisted that a well established agricultural practice is usually sound. We like to agree with them, but are at a loss to know the advantage of keeping the male birds in the flock after the regular hatching season is over. And yet this is done on a majority of corn belt farms where male birds are carried through into spring.

The lowered quality of the eggs, the feed eaten by the birds, the usual decline in their value between May or June and late fall, the trouble they cause bothering the growing stock if they can get in with them, are some of the reasons why people should sell roosters as soon as the regular hatching season is over. "Swat the rooster" campaigns have been held and much writing has been done each year, urging the adoption of an early sale program. But it has not been adopted very widely. There must be a reason. Why is it, asks a writer in Wallace's Farmer.

Poultry Notes

Blackhead disease, a turkey illness, is blamed for the dying out of the heath hen

• • •

Cod-liver oil fed to hens improves the hatchability of the eggs about 10 to 25 per cent; milk, 5 to 15 per cent; and green feed, 5 to 10 per cent.

• • •

A bill was introduced in the Ohio legislature authorizing county officials to collect $5 for every stray chicken found on the highways.

• • •

On a ship which recently arrived at Plymouth, England, were 10,000,000 Australian eggs.

• • •

There were 469,457,000 chickens on farms in the United States, according to an estimate of January 1, 1930, by the Department of Agriculture.

• • •

"Laying batteries," tiers of individual metal coops in which hens are permanently caged, are being offered poultrymen. Eggs are delivered from the cages automatically as soon as they are laid.

Cure for Seasickness: A plan you might try is to bolt down your meals.

"I want a job so bad," said a Kingston man, "that I would be willing to take a job of feeding raw meat to a man-eating tiger."

Clay Mudd, editor of the Brushville Bugle, received from a lady who lives in Pea Ridge, a little poem entitled: "I Wonder if You Miss Me?" After reading it, Mr. Mudd returned the poem to the lady, with the following note: "Dear Madam: If he does, he ought never to be trusted with firearms again."

The world will never get any better until children become quite an improvement over their parents.

Other Hunter—Good! Did you give him both barrels?

Hunter (wiping his perspiring brow)—Both barrels! I gave him the whole gun!

Slogan by a merchant: "We've got to get out and hustle. There ain't no Santa Claus no more."

Windy Wolf—Did you ever taste moonshine whiskey?

Ever notice htat the fellow who sits in the back seat at church usually lands in a front seat at the show?

Ye Shall Know the Truth and The Truth Shall Make You Uncomfortable.

Gladys (indignantly)—Smoke a cigarette! Good gracious. I'd rather kiss the first man who came along!

THE MOST IMPORTANT QUESTION IN ELECTRIC REFRIGERATION

Westinghouse is!

● Before you select any refrigerator ... look at the mechanism. Ask ... "Is it Hermetically-Sealed? ... Is it sealed and protected for lifetime performance? ... Is it bathed in a permanent supply of oil? ... Is it free of all exposed moving parts, stuffing boxes and belts?"

This is important. For these are the things that make the Westinghouse Hermetically-Sealed mechanism your greatest guarantee of continued economy and dependability ... a guarantee backed by a name that means everything in electricity. See for yourself ... today!

MYSTERY RADIO VOICE BAFFLES PHIL BAKER

Whose is the Mysterious Radio Voice Which Interrupts Phil Baker Every Friday Night over the National Broadcasting Company's Coast-to-Coast Network?

Where is the station with a wave length that permits radio's newest star to be constantly harassed by disconcerting wisecracks?

The heckling began last Friday night when Baker, as the Armour Jester, started his new series of broadcasts. The mysterious voice interrupted him a dozen times; cackled at him, poked fun at him, baffled him at every turn. As a result, Phil Baker is seeing red every time the air intruder is mentioned. There will be a real blow-up if the unwarranted interference continues tonight.

If you want to get a good laugh out of Phil Baker's dilemma, listen in tonight to the Armour Hour, sponsored by Armour and Company, Chicago. Tune in your nearest N.B.C. station at 9:30 P.M.

In an interview a film star declared that she inherited her good looks. One of her rivals supports this statement by declaring that when her father died he left her a beauty parlor.

CHAPTER NO. TWO
"JUNGLE MYSTERY"
with TOM TYLER"

At The Theatres

Today

Kingston: "Tess of the Storm Country". After a long period of time, Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor, the screen's most prominent and popular romantic team, are together again in a story especially adapted to their talents. This time Miss Gaynor is the daughter of a sea captain who decides to settle down on land after giving his best years to the sea, and who finds himself tangled up in a murder before he has been enjoying his retirement for any great length of time. His daughter and the boy she falls in love with, played by Charles Farrell, solve the murder together, and all turns out happily in the end. Well photographed and interesting from start to finish is this last picture that this romantic team will be seen in together.

Orpheum: "Horse Feathers" and "Gambling Sex". The Four Marx brothers run through their foolish antics in this talkie, and offer an evening of laughs and foolishness. This time the action takes place in a college, and the plot is the disjointed tale of a college professor who seeks to save his son from the wiles of a college widow, only to succumb himself. Thelma Todd is also in the cast. "Gambling Sex" stars Ruth Hall in a gambling story. Grant Withers is in the supporting cast.

Broadway: "Flaming Guns." Tom Mix has a lot of fun and a lot of trouble in this, his latest and last western talkie. This time he rounds up a bunch of cattle thieves single handed who are stealing the cattle of his boss. Then he falls in love with the daughter of his employer, and instead of wedding bells, he is thrown in jail. Not liking jail he escapes, returns to the ranch, gets the girl and heads for the border with his faithful horse Tony. There is a mad pursuit but to no avail, and the ending is romantic and happy. William Farnum, Ruth Hall and Clarence Wilson are in the supporting cast.

Tomorrow

Kingston: "A Farewell to Arms". This poignant, tragic story of a love that blossomed in the mire and brutality of the World War, stands out as an exceptional screen drama, faithfully translated to the screen from the world famous novel to Ernest Hemingway. Frank Borzage, voted the best director in the picture industry for 1932, proves his capabilities with perhaps his finest directorial effort. And the work of Helen Hayes, Adolphe Menjou, Gary Cooper, Jack LaRue, and Mary Phillips stands out against this gigantic scene of a world at war. It's the heart rending story of a nurse who falls in love with an American boy enlisted in the Italian army. When he has to return to the front, the nurse goes to a little Swiss village to await the coming of their child. Frantic, torn between duty and an overpowering love, the soldier deserts, and fights his way back through the lines to reach her just in time to see her die. Remarkable acting by Helen Hayes in the role of the nurse, and the splendid performance of Gary Cooper as the soldier, make this picture one of the most realistic dramas to be seen in years. Some of the war scenes are remarkable, and the broken retreat of the Italian army after the disaster at Caporetto is a magnificent bit of screen photography. A picture worth seeing.

Orpheum: Same.

Broadway: "Down to Earth". Will Rogers again scores a personal triumph in this story of a rich family that has so much money it fairly droops under the burden of it. The depression wipes out the fortune, and they are forced to give up the luxuries. Mr. Rogers, as the head of the family, shows them the way to happiness, and before the show is over, the family has learned to enjoy its loss in fortune. A bright, cheery play with a fine cast lending able support.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press.)

Van Buren, Ind., March 24 (AP).—Linemen for the Indian Service Corporation reported in the power line, but no customers complained of interrupted service.

Here's how it was, they said: The line broke, a cow touched the wire, a dog touched the cow, a possum touched the dog, all three were killed; but the possum also touched the other end of the break and completed the circuit.

Beer Brings a Break.

Chicago—From postmaster of Chicago to president of a brewing company is to be the lot of Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder. A Republican, he is subject to displacement any time now, but announced he was all ready to step into his new job in the brew business.

What's All the Fuss About?

Kenosha, Wis.—Esther Kavisco, 6, watched curiously while firemen searched through the ashes of her home for her body. Then she explained to the fire chief she hadn't been burned. She had been visiting a neighbor.

A Wise Youngster.

Chicago—At two years and 11 months, Allen Paul Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cooper, is amazing folk by reciting the alphabet backward and forward, counting to 100 and spelling out many polysyllabic words some persons would stumble over.

Honest Man's Game.

San Francisco—San Franciscans, during the bank holidays, gave the park commission $3,238 in small checks for golf course and tennis court fees.

"We have expected a percentage of these checks would 'bounce'," said Captain B. P. Lamb, secretary of the park commission, "but we just completed clearance of them, and not a one has come back."

Beer in the Home.

Oklahoma City—Beer, Mrs. Leso told the court, keeps her husband home.

Speaking in behalf of her spouse, charged with possession of the brew, Mrs. Leso said:

"Why, he doesn't even know how to make it, but so long as I keep the beer and give him a couple of bottles a day he won't leave home to drink with the boys."

Judge Mike Foster fined Leso $11.

To Jail for Doctor's Bill.

Chicago—Mrs. Lydia Rowland, 58, was sent to jail by Judge J. G. Van Keuren following representations by Dr. John O'Neil, physician, that she gave him a defective mortgage on her home in part payment for a bill for his services. He obtained a judgment and the court issued the order committing the aged woman to jail under a malice clause in the verdict.

What's Good for Pigs?

Waukegan, Ill.—Precisely what Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin, society leader, thinks would be the very best diet for pigs to make them healthy and strong, remained a secret today, officially at least.

She was asked what she considered a nicely balanced diet by an attorney in William Schoreder's $10,000 suit against her for alleged false arrest, but her own attorney objected and was sustained by the court. The litigation followed an inspection of Schoreder's pig sty and allegations by Mrs. McLaughlin that he wasn't treating his pigs as pigs should be treated.

Red Faced Sheriffs.

Pittsburgh—Deputy sheriffs took Joseph Micucki into a crowded court room and announced he intended to plead guilty on a robbery charge.

The court called Micucki's case, and the deputies turned to produce the defendant.

Then they blushed: Micucki had walked away.

They're still blushing; Micucki hasn't been seen since.

ARDONIA

Ardonia, March 24—Mrs. Orville Seymour entertained on Friday Miss Gertrude Every, who is visiting at the Shultis home in Modena.

Web. Degroadt of Modena will move into the house of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Jake Degroadt, of this place in the near future.

Mrs. Orville Seymour was a recent caller in New Paltz.

William Palmer was a caller in Modena on Friday.

Miss Emma Palmer entertained the Home Bureau members at her home on Wednesday.

TAFFETA RETURNS, PLAID AND CHECKS

Seen in Gay Blouses and Vivid New Scarfs.

Taffeta, that good old standby whose rustle used to add to the magnificence of grandma's Sunday frock, is the last word in fashion news just now.

But don't get any misplaced visions of a nation clad in rustling black taffeta frocks.

It isn't black, this time, and there isn't enough of it to rustle.

It's being shown in gay new plaid and checkered blouses, with short puff sleeves and ascot-tie necklines.

You'll see it in vivid new scarfs, Roman striped or plaid, that you can tie in a bow or wear ascot fashion.

Even hats have gone taffeta on us, some of the smartest spring styles being crisp little sailors and turbans of navy blue taffeta, banded with gay striped or checked or solid color ribbon.

CROCHET GLOVES

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Gloves have become front page news. The program they are staging is nothing less than sensational from the novelty standpoint. For example, news comes from Paris concerning gloves that are made of the same material as the dress, mentioning especially pique, tweed, velvet and even taffeta. By the way there's nothing smarter than taffeta accessories this season. Reports from the French city especially cite lacy hand-crocheted gloves. Which gives us an idea—why not crochet your own? You can secure printed instructions from most any fancywork department. The very attractive long gloves pictured are easily made. Their lacy openwork stitch is their charm. They are crocheted of fine white mercerized cotton and of course they wash perfectly which carries with it the promise of being immaculately gloved at all times. It may interest you to know that the four-pointed collar is also hand-crocheted of white cotton.

©. 1933, Western Newspaper Union.

STYLE NOTES

It's taffeta, taffeta, taffeta for spring!

Sleeves have taken to widening at the elbow.

'Tis said that clocked stockings are coming back.

Tailored suits and accessories reflect mannish influence.

Plaids from taffeta to gingham are conspicuously present.

In all style centers smart cottons are given great importance.

Pale blue is a much talked-of color for the coming months.

Competition is keen between grays and beige or string color.

Sheer Blouse Is Back in Popular Favor Once More

An old favorite—the sheer blouse which reveals the lingerie beneath—has returned to the mode.

The new blouses are not quite so all-revealing as their predecessors in the mode. But they are being made of organdie, batiste, georgette crepe and other similarly fragile fabrics, decorated with inserts of lace and hand-drawn work and hemstitching.

And they do require great care in the choice of slips to be worn beneath them. Women who wear these blouses with their tailored suits for dress-up occasions are buying white slips, because in many instances the effect is spoiled by a glimpse of color beneath. These slips are cut on severely tailored lines, in crepe or satin, with uplift bandeau tops, but they frequently show much lace, usually of cready hand-run alencon, with perhaps a bit of handwork.

Bonbon Effects Shown in Latest Fluffy Blouses

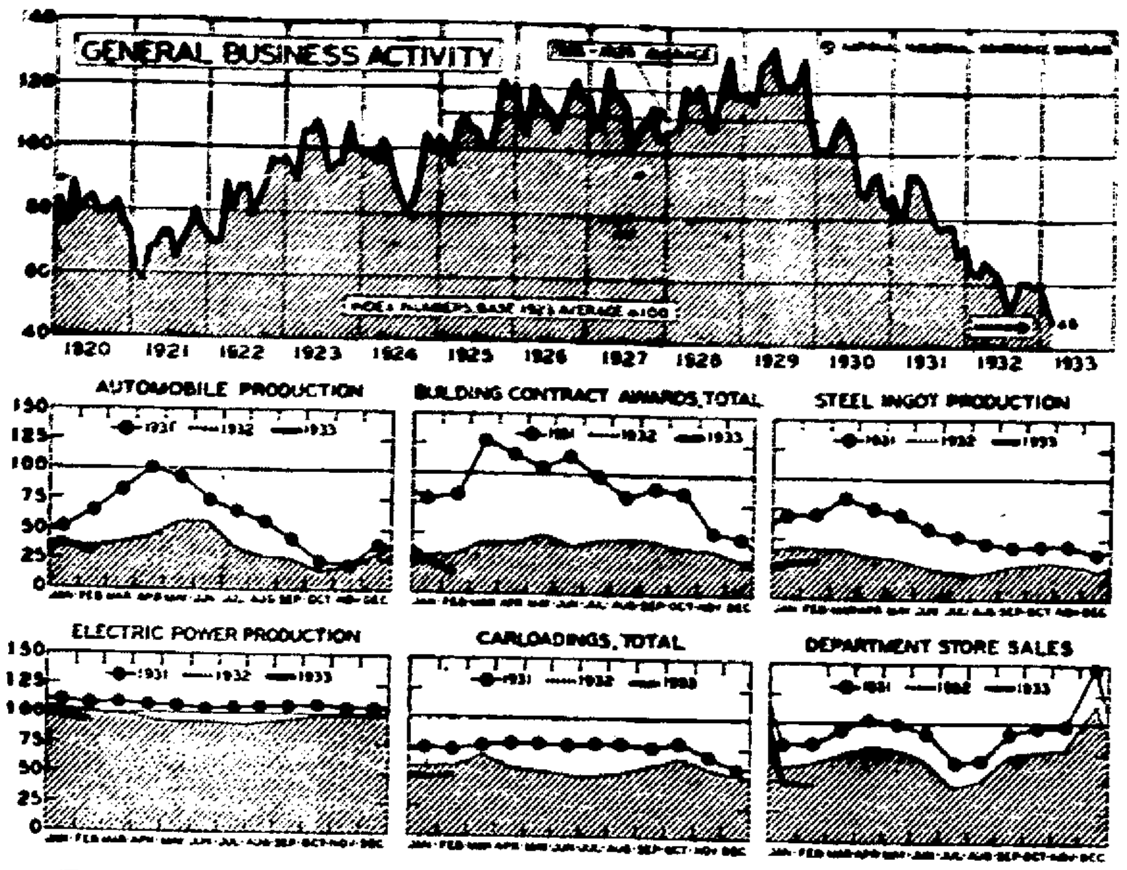
Blousemakers are introducing the softer note in the most utterly feminine type that can be imagined.

While not strictly new for spring (since it was launched last fall but not generally adopted), the "fluffy" blouse involves such bonbon effects as sheer silks, candy pastels and rows of baby width valenciennes lace ruffled, and applied in allover patterns. It is the lingerie 1900 blouse to the nth degree.

Has Best-Hidden Nest

The nighthawk which feeds on small moths caught while on the wing has the best-hidden nest of all ground birds, yet this nest is betrayed by the mother bird, who rises directly from the nest into the air when disturbed.—Our Dumb Animals Magazine.

BUSINESS TRENDS—Financial Crisis Cuts Activity



The large chart above shows the course of general business activity from 1920 to the end of February. The smaller charts show activity in specific industries during the last three years. All business activity fell off in January and February, the February decline being due in large part to recent financial difficulties. Production in specific industries either declined or failed to advance as much as was expected.

Hollywood Styles Hint Easter's Approach

There Are Extremes, But They're Graceful And Modes Show Novel Variations

A frock of blue sheer wool with white souffle de soie collar is Frances Dee's choice here. White silk braid accents the shoulders of the frock. Interesting also are the cape flares of the sleeves.

Here's millinery hint from Hollywood, where hats are getting due attention as Easter nears. Mary Carlisle wears a quilted-type black silk, dipped toward the front with flowers beneath the brim. It is particularly revealing as to coiffure and has a chic effectiveness well set off by the frock and gloves. Footwear of tan reptile skins adds its contrast.

Claudette Colbert wears Scotch plaid gloves with a jaunty white silk sports frock. A bow of the same Scotch plaid is worn at the mannish collar of the frock. The colors of the plaid are red, green and blue.

Germany Moves To Expel Jews

Berlin, March 24 (AP)—Adolf Hitler's legalized four-year term as dictator began today with one western German state taking action which may lead to the expulsion of all eastern Jews within its borders.

The legislative bodies of both the German Reich and its greatest unit, Prussia, have been indefinitely suspended. The signature of President von Hindenburg to decrees Hitler may desire to enact no longer is necessary as a result of the Reichstag's action yesterday in granting Hitler absolute power.

The Hitler government's commissioner in the Palatinate, lying between the Rhine and France, has ordered that no bank or postal funds be delivered to eastern Jews until they settle all business obligations. The ban was invoked until all business obligations have been settled.

Most of the eastern Jews in Palatinate emigrated there from Poland since 1914. (An estimated two-fifths of the eastern Jewish population of Europe—3,500,000—came under Polish domination after the war and this total has decreased by nearly one million).

Survivor in Crash Killing 3 on Stand In Supreme Court

Mary Arace, one of the two survivors of the accident which claimed three lives on July 16, last, at West Park, took the stand in supreme court Thursday and gave her version of the accident in which Josephine Tourisi of Port Ewen, Angeline Arace, of this city, and Oscar Zimmerman were fatally injured. Mary Arace was also injured when a car operated by Hillis A. Sanford of Tenafly, N. J., crashed just south of the Esopus-Lloyd line. The action now on trial in supreme court before Judge Russell and a jury is the action brought by the administrator of the estate of Josephine Tourisi, 22 year old Port Ewen girl who was killed. By the action it is sought to recover $35,000 from the owner of the car, Clifford T. Sanford, and Josephj Rottermund, operator of a Buick car which it is alleged the Sanford car side-swiped before leaving the road and crashing into a tree and stone-wall, tipping over and fatally injuring the three persons. Only Sanford, the driver of the car, and Mary Arace survive of the five people who were crowded into the small Ford coupe at the time of the accident.

Sergeant John Lockhart of the Highland sub-station of the State Troopers who went immediately to the scene of the accident also told his story Thursday afternoon.

Miss Arace told of having started out with her sister, Angeline, and the Tourisi girl to go to Poughkeepsie where they were to visit Woodcliff Pleasure Park. They went to the corner of Henry street and Broadway and there Mary returned home with her mother who had been shopping up-town. While she was home the Ford coupe driven by Sanford and occupied by his friend, Oscar Zimmerman, came along. Zimmerman resided in Bergenfield, N. J. The two lads spoke to the girls and pulled up at the curb a short distance below. Mary said that she rejoined the two other girls and they went down to the place where the Ford was stopped. The two young men asked them where they were going and when told that they intended to go to Highland the lads invited the three girls to ride along in the Ford. On the way down Miss Arace said she sat between Sanford and Zimmermann and her sister sat on her lap and Miss Tourisi sat on the lap of Zimmermann.

As they drove south Miss Arace said there was some conversation and she noticed Sanford drove toward the center of the road all the way. The speed was not especially fast as she recalled and when near the scene of the accident she said she felt a jar as though some object had been struck. The car was on the concrete highway then. It continued for a distance and ran off the road and turned over. She said she could not recall striking the tree or fence but remembered the car was on the road when the slight jar was noticed and that after that the car took a diagonal course to the ditch and turned over on its side. Things went black and she could recall none of the facts just prior to or after the accident. Some man took Sanford from the car and she was assisted out and then she asked them to take her sister out. She said she was dazed.

When the car turned over she remembered calling for help. Who assisted her out she was not sure but a man came from somewhere and gave assistance. She said she had not noticed the Buick car of Rottermund at the time of the jar or after the accident.

Sergeant Lockhart, who had preceded the girl to the stand, told of his investigation of the accident. He said he was called that afternoon and went to the scene. When he arrived there were people and cars at the scene. He saw the Ford car which was wrecked and the bodies of two people on the side of the road.

He talked with the people there. The Ford car was on its wheels at that time and he traced the course of the car back to where it had struck the stone-wall and also a tree. From there there were marks on the shoulder of the road and on the concrete. These marks he traced back for a distance of about 120 feet. Beyond that and to the north was the Buick car of Rottermund. He looked over the Buick car and observed a scrape on the front left fender. It was slight. There was damage to a hub cap. Rottermund told him that his car was not damaged and Lockhart said he called attention to the hub-cap. On the stand Thursday he said he believed he had picked the hub cap up from the roadway but later when his testimony given at a hearing just after the accident was read he said that the testimony given at that time was correct, it had been given while the acts were fresh in his mind and that as a trooper he was called on to investigate hundreds of accidents and he could not keep the details long in his mind. He said he recalled showing the hub cap to Rottermund and that Mr. Rottermund threw the cap in the rear seat of the car. He was asked in detail in regard to distances and marks which he saw there that afternoon. The case will be continued today.

Roscoe Elsworth of Brinnier & Elsworth appears for plaintiff. Frank W. Brooks and Henry Cole appear for Mr. Sanford and Harry H. Flemming appears for defendant Rottermund.

How I Broke Into The Movies

Copyright by Hal C. Herman

By RAMON NOVARRO

MY MOTHER had great ambitions for me. She wanted me to be a concert pianist. My father had ambitions for me, too. His were along different lines. He wanted me to be a dentist. I wanted to be an actor.

Although I studied music and really tried to follow my mother's wishes, I found myself in Hollywood going from one studio to another looking for a job. I believe that we usually do the things that we want to do. But jobs were scarce and I needn't go into the details of those weary days when I interviewed every casting director and assistant casting director in the town, only to receive the same unwelcome reply—"No."

I had to live—and there was no money, so I hung out my shingle as a teacher of piano and voice. I secured enough pupils to keep the proverbial wolf from my humble door and I still had time to make the weary rounds of the studios day after day.

At that time the Hollywood Community theater was producing plays every week. This was a little theater and various actors who were between pictures donated their services. I offered mine, too, just to keep myself interested and was given the leading role in a very charming pantomime, "The Spanish Fandango."

Ramon Novarro.

One night Rex Ingram was in the audience, although I did not know it until I received a call to report to the old Metro studio for an interview with the famous director.

Perhaps I was not as excited over this as I should have been. I had been disappointed so many times that I believed that this was just "another one of those things." Of course, I went to see Ingram and he gave me the usual preliminary tests that day and that made me think that perhaps this visit had not been in vain.

When I was told that I was to have the role of Rupert of Hentzau in "The Prisoner of Zenda" I really felt that my career was begun. It had, too, because Ingram had truly taken an interest in me and gave me every part that he thought I could play.

"Where the Pavement Ends," "The Red Lily," "Scaramouche," "Ben Hur," "Lovers" and "The Flying Fleet"—all these pictures came to me very quickly after that and my ambition to be known as an actor was, I hope, realized.

Recent pictures in which I have appeared are "Huddle," a college football story, and "Son-Daughter," in which I played the part of a Chinese prince opposite Helen Hayes.

So now the embryo Paderewskis of the coming generation will have to find a new instructor, as I'm afraid piano lessons don't pay quite as well as the movies.

Mary Brian Started Out to Be Commercial Artist

Mary Brian was born in Corsicana, Texas. Like Gary Cooper, she went to Los Angeles to take up commercial art and remained to become a motion picture player. During her childhood she showed a natural aptitude for drawing and the elder Brians fondly dreamed of an artistic career for her. Her pencil sketches found their way into the high school paper back home and she designed costumes for exhibitions. Believing that Mary would have greater opportunities for developing her talent in a big place, the Brian family moved to Los Angeles. Shortly after their arrival, Mary won a beauty contest and later emerged with the most votes in one of those personality contests that were much in vogue during the last decade. Albert Kaufman, at that time managing director of Grauman's Metropolitan theater, offered her a part in a prologue and encouraged her to try her luck in pictures. Five minutes after she had been ushered into the office of Herbert Brenon, director, she was chosen for the role of Wendy in the film version of "Peter Pan." Leading parts were easy to get after that picture came out. Among the films she has appeared in are "The Street of Forgotten Men," "Behind the Front," "Beau-Geste," "Shanghai Bound," "Man Power," "Under the Tonto Rim," "Forgotten Faces," "River of Romance," "The Kibitzer," "Brown of Harvard," "High Hat," "The Royal Family of Broadway," "Homicide Squad," "It's Tough to Be Famous," "Varsity," "The Virginian" and "Blessed Event."

Financial and Commercial

New York, March 24 (AP)—The stock market was a waiting affair today with price-backing and filling in desultory trading with an irregularly downward trend.

The [illegible] improvement shown in the Federal reserve statements had been anticipated and indications in mercantile reviews of some further pickup in wholesale trade were inadequate to generate new enthusiasm.

Scattered selling carried a number of issues temporarily off a point or two, including American Telephone, Case, U. S. Steel, American Can, and Allied Chemical, although these losses were reduced and in some instances cancelled, by early afternoon. Rails fluctuated uncertainly, but in the main showed a fairly good tone. Union Pacific rose more than a point, lost its gain, and again pushed up more than a point. Food stocks, some of the merchandising issues, wet shares and New York tractions had intervals of firmness. The tractions have been helped by late unification steps.

The Weekly Review of Dun & Bradstreet said a real spurt [illegible] started in wholesale buying in preparation for Easter trade, but, discussing general business, said: "Already hesitation has appeared in some divisions because of pending farm legislation, the lack of sustained price advances in agricultural products and the delay in reopening small banks throughout the country."

International banking quarters were inclined to the more hopeful view of the central European situation. One international banking house received a cable from what it described as a very trustworthy source in Berlin saying that the immediate policy of Dr. Schacht, new Reichsbank president, would be more liberal in expanding credit internally. No change was foreseen in the policy of service on external dollar bonds, although it was pointed out that should the recent shrinkage of export surplus continue, the transfer problem would become severe.

Freer-Holmes

Binnewater, March 24—A very pretty wedding was solemnized in the Lutheran Evangelical Church at Maspeth, Long Island on March 19, when Miss Viola Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Holmes of Maspeth, L. I., became the bride of Arthur Freer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Freer of Binnewater. The bride wore a dress of Alice blue crepe and carried a bouquet of violets and forget-me-nots. The maid of honor wore a green crepe dress and carried an orange bouquet. As the wedding march was played the groom and best man came slowly up the aisle to be met at the altar by the bride, bridesmaid and the bride's father. There Pastor Schaefer united them with a ring ceremony. They have the best wishes of their many friends both in Maspeth and Binnewater. The bridesmaid was Miss Hazel E. Peterson of Maspeth and the best man was Joseph Styles of Cottekill. Those present at the wedding besides the bride and groom were Mr. and Mrs. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Freer, Mr. Styles and Miss Peterson. After the wedding a bountiful supper was served at the home of the bride where several of her friends joined them. The dining room was beautifully decorated with white streamers and a large white bell hung from the center of the ceiling. There was a large wedding cake with a bell, over which were some flowers and a white dove, in the center. After the reception and well wishes from all present, the couple left for their home in Binnewater, where they will reside.

Rubber Check That Won't Bounce Back

MISS FRANCES HAVLIK of Akron, Ohio, is holding the world's largest check. It was made by the Goodyear Rubber company, and although partially made of rubber, it will not "bounce back" because it is reinforced with duralumin, the material used in making the framework of the Akron, new naval airship. The check is four feet long, 18 inches wide and weighs 15 pounds. The back of the check is rubber flooring, and after the check has figured in 100 transactions and bears 100 names of endorsers it will be taken to the bank to be cashed.

Ready to Put His Taste to Work Again

AMERICA'S oldest professional wine taster is getting ready to go back to work. Albert Lachman, seventy-six, of San Francisco, is one of the few American survivors of that select circle of connoisseurs whose keen palates can recognize at a single taste the very district in which a distinctive zinfandel, riesling or claret was grown. He expects congress to legalize the fermented juice of the grape before the end of 1933, and since real wine tasters have grown scarcer than ever before from unemployment, the industry is calling him back into harness. He has gone into "training" after 24 years of retirement.

This Problem Too Deep For Sergeant

She was a trim looking little old lady, dressed in clothes that had evidently seen better days, but were clean and neat. She walked into police headquarters this morning and asked to see the man in charge.

"I guess this was meant for me," she said as she took a dog summons out of her handbag, "although it was left by a policeman in the mail box next door and it has my name spelled wrong on it."

"Yes," replied Sergeant Phinney in an inquiring tone.

"You see", she continued, "my little girl is sick in bed with the measles and she is worried that the policeman will take away 'Nooky'. He is a little dog we have had for fifteen years."

She paused a minute and there was a catch in her voice as she added: "Nooky is blind in one eye but we love him just the same, and all the money I got in the world is $2.27."

"Yes," prompted the sergeant as she again paused.

"I wonder if you wouldn't let me pay half of the license fee now and the other half in six months," she said.

"The man you want to see is the city clerk," replied the sergeant gently, "he won't be in his office until 9 o'clock."

"Thank you," said the trim little lady as she left headquarters.

"I thought I had better let the city clerk solve that problem," said the sergeant to the other men in the room.

City Marshal John Costello expects to complete the work of issuing summonses to delinquent dog owners this week, and all who have failed to obtain 1933 licenses for their animals will be required to appear in city court to explain why.

There will be no match tonight, the one at the Koenig A. C. having been cancelled, so that all billiard fans may witness the performance of Ralph Greenleaf, world's champion for 11 years, at Nick's. Besides going through his regular routine of trick shots, the champ will play Freddie Planthaber, Kingston expert. Starting time is 8 o'clock. Indications are that the place will be filled, so all desiring good points of vantage are advised to arrive early.

NICARAGUA

Nicaraguan Boys Robbing an Alligator's Nest.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.)

PEACE has been promised to Nicaragua with the signing of a pact recently between the rebels who have caused turmoil for several years, and the central government.

Next to peace, Nicaragua's greatest needs are improved means of transportation and communication. At present the national railway system consists of a line, some 150 miles long, running from the principal Pacific coast port of Corinto, via Leon, to the capital city, Managua, and on to Granada and Diriamba. A 24-mile line linking Lake Nicaragua with San Juan del Sur, a few private lines, and a three-mile steam tramway swell the republic's total railway mileage to 193 miles. In wet weather most of the roads of the country are traversable only by ox-cart, but some 3,000 miles of surfaced highways have been completed or are under construction.

Although Nicaragua is the largest state of Central America—about equal in area to New York state—its population is only equal to that of Pittsburgh, Pa. Three-fourths of the inhabitants live in the mountainous and upland western half of the country.

The history of the republic is a chronicle of the sufferings of the masses, principally of mixed Spanish and Indian descent, under kaleidoscopic changes of government. It is recorded that in one period of 16 years 396 persons in succession exercised supreme power—an average period of control of hardly more than two weeks per ruler!

Among the most dramatic incidents of Nicaragua's past was the William Walker episode, which in a measure paralleled the Maximilian tragedy in Mexico. During five years of his tempestuous career this young American adventurer became in turn "liberator," virtual dictator, president, and a refugee from Nicaragua. Twice arrested and deported by United States forces, he was finally made a prisoner by an officer of the British navy and was surrendered to Honduran authorities, who tried and condemned him to be shot. He was executed September 12, 1860.

Twice has Nicaragua felt the punitive force of European powers—in 1875, when Germany blockaded the republic's principal ports to force the payment of an indemnity of $30,000 for an alleged insult to a German consul, and in 1895, when Great Britain collected $15,000 damages for the arrest and expulsion of one of its consular officers at Bluefields, who had been charged by Nicaragua with conspiracy against the government.

Should Prosper With Peace.

The United States has repeatedly endeavored to bring peace out of the Nicaraguan chaos, and United States marines were stationed in the republic intermittently for many years.

When Nicaragua's political parties eventually permit, or are coerced into permitting, the populace to settle down to cultivating the country's rich banana lands, her coffee plantations, her cacao groves, and her cotton fields, there is no reason why this largest of the Central American republics should not become one of the most prosperous.

The agricultural wealth of Nicaragua constitutes only a part of her natural resources, for there is a magnificent growth of mahogany and of other cabinet woods in her forests, and her hills are rich in gold and silver, while on the upland plains there is excellent pasturage for thousands of cattle.

The most striking physical features of Nicaragua are her chain of volcanoes lying parallel to the Pacific seaboard, and her two great lakes, Managua and Nicaragua, the latter being the largest sheet of fresh water in the Americas south of Lake Michigan and north of Lake Titicaca in the highlands of Bolivia and Peru.

Nicaragua enjoys the advantage of having almost at her door an eager customer for all her agricultural products. The United States buys two-thirds of all the republic's exports and in return the latter purchases three-fourths of her imports from us.

Three of Nicaragua's cities have frequently basked in the news spotlight—Managua, the present capital, and Leon and Granada, each of which have aspired to become the first city, particularly since the devastating earthquake which nearly wiped out Managua in 1931.

Managua has a population of approximately 60,000, but its importance is largely political. It is the distributing center for coffee from the hills to the south, which constitute the leading coffee section of the republic.

An ancient Indian village existed on the site of Managua when the Spaniards arrived. The town was of little importance until 1855 when the filibustering expedition of William Walker strangely improved its lot. The rival cities of Leon and Granada had been capitals alternately. Walker's invasion united the factions and Managua became the compromise capital.

Making Managua Better.

The town is laid out in squares. Except for the National palace (the Capitol building) and the president's residence, most of the buildings in Managua were small and low. They were constructed for the most part of a soft volcanic stone or of mud bricks (adobe). These large, crude bricks are laid in a wooden frame and are plastered inside and out. These buildings were not highly inflammable when standing and fires have been confined usually to single structures.

Until recently Managua has had dirt streets—alternately dusty and muddy—and has lacked sanitary conveniences. During the last few years a million-dollar-improvement campaign has been carried out under the supervision of American contractors and engineers. The town has been furnished with electric lights, waterworks, sewers, and paving. Approximately one-third of the streets have been paved.

There is a good sized American colony in Managua, probably several hundred civilians. A modern airport built by the United States marine forces has helped Managua to become one of the leading air terminals in Latin America. Here passengers en route to or from South America must change planes.

Leon and Granada are centuries-old rivals for the distinction of being Nicaragua's capital. Each city was founded in 1523, and in the succeeding two and a half centuries the seat of government alternated between them.

Leon has been second in population in Nicaragua since Managua's rise to power. Located on the railroad that connects Managua and Granada with Corinto, the country's principal seaport, Leon has enjoyed a consistent flow of trade and has become one of the transportation centers of Central America. In the fertile mountain country surrounding Leon corn, sugar cane, cattle and dairy products are the principal sources of wealth.

The town itself is typical of many small cities in Latin America. Low houses of adobe, covered with red tiles, line the cobblestone streets. Leon's cathedral, started in 1610, is one of the show places of Nicaragua. The city shows the effect of numerous revolutions, but its plaza is still one of the handsomest in the country.

Leon Makes Lots of Soap.

Leon's manufacturing establishments include a large soap factory, which is said to supply 80 per cent of the laundry soap used on the west coast, a candle factory, two bottling works, three tanneries, and a water-power electric light plant.

Granada, the oldest, by a few months, and perhaps the wealthiest city in Nicaragua, was founded by Francisco Fernandez de Cordoba as an inland port at the western end of Lake Nicaragua. During Spanish Colonial days boats from the Caribbean sea came up the San Juan river and across Lake Nicaragua directly to the docks of Granada. While this accessibility made Granada an important trading center, it also left it a target for early pirate attacks, and it was several times sacked, but always rebuilt.

Granada is the terminus of the Pacific railroad, which connects the city with Managua, Leon, and Corinto, a distance of 171 miles. The railroad operates a small steamer on Lake Nicaragua connecting Granada twice a week with the other towns on the lake. Granada's principal trade is in coffee, sugar cane, cattle and dairy products. It is the smallest of the three principal cities, having only 22,000 population. Granada has always supported the so-called "conservative" ideas in government, while Leon has favored the "liberal" side.

Electrical Wind Indicator

An electrical wind indicator at the National Academy of Sciences in Washington will tell you which way the wind is blowing. This interesting little gadget is connected above the building with an anemometer and a wind vane. By pressing on a button lights flicker indicating the velocity of the wind and the direction the wind is blowing.—Pathfinder Magazine.

C. S. SCHOONMAKER SPEAKS AT MEN'S CLUB MEETING

The Men's Club of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church held its third monthly meeting Wednesday evening in Epworth Hall. Fifty men were present at this meeting which was one of the most enjoyable held.

A collection of old and new songs were sung by the men and lead by the very popular leader, Paul Zucca with Dan Bittner at the piano assisted by Frank Twohig and Jim Becker with fiddle and accordion.

President Frank Hyatt welcomed the men and their guests and the Rev. Mr. Sharples of Port Ewen officially opened the meeting with prayer.

After a short, snappy, progressive business session, several new members were voted into the Club and Chairman J. Watson Wheeler of the membership committee promised a very interesting initiation for the next meeting. The entertainment committee with Warren Smith as spokesman, introduced Harold Davis who gave one of his very humorous sketches. His setting was one of the local restaurants and was greatly enjoyed by the men.

The speaker of the evening, Clarence S. Schoonmaker, general secretary of the Kingston Y. M. C. A., was then introduced by the spokesman and his address which he called his "Philosophy of Life" was very attentively listened to and appreciatively received. Mr. Schoonmaker stressed two points, the first being that whether individual, club or nation, it must have men with vision, dreamers, perhaps. The greatest of achievements have been air-castles before taking real form. "But," said Mr. Schoonmaker, "The dreams must become concrete and the dreamers must become men of action to fulfill their part in life."

Members of the Y. M. C. A. Public Speaking Club of which Mr. Schoonmaker is the instructor, were there as guests of the club with Mr. Schoonmaker. These were Harvey Series, H. LeRoy Gill, Harold Davis and Warren Smith.

After some more singing and selections by Twohig and Becker, the refreshment committee served the evening repast, and after a game of dart baseball, the evening came to a very appropriate ending with everyone greatly pleased with the program.

Upper Room Mission.

The regular midweek prayer and praise service will be held in the Upper room Mission, 562 Broadway, tonight at 7:45. A cordial welcome is extended to all.

Raining Some Place Now

It is raining hard in some part of the world every hour of every day, and scientists conservatively have estimated that more than 250,000,000,000,000 gallons of water are precipitated from the heavens each 24 hours.

Prisoners Are Reconfined

Approximately half of the 5,000 persons released on parole each year from Massachusetts penal institutions are returned to confinement for crimes committed while on parole or for violations of parole regulations.

McManus Anxious To Get Red Sox Out Of American Cellar

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

The combination of a wealthy new ownership and one of baseball's brainiest strategists as business manager probably won't produce any miracles with the tail-end Boston Red Sox this year.

Tom Yawkey and Eddie Collins realize it was five years before even the famous Ruppert bankroll achieved notable results with the Yankees. They probably will be delighted if the club climbs out of the cellar this year, a stunt that Manager Marty McManus thinks he can accomplish, although it has been done only twice in the last 11 years.

"Players who are just tail-end performers with a club that is badly mired, often astonish you with what they do when they think they are going somewhere," McManus says, "and these players know this club must go somewhere now."

Substantial Shifts

Marty refrains from any boasts or predictions. His own managerial experience is limited. He has had little to work with so far. Since last season, the sox acquisitions have consisted of one-well regarded minor league pitcher, Walter Brown from Montreal, and an assortment of talent obtained in a deal with the White Sox. Substantial shifts have been made in both the infield and outfield under the "new deal."

The prospective starting lineup is a bit heavy-footed but it will pack enough batting dynamite to give the pitching defense plenty of scoring assistance. Dale Alexander, the American League hitting champion, Urban Hodapp, Smead Jolley and Bob Fothergill all carry a long-range wallop in their bats.

Promising Pitchers

The return to good health and condition of Henry Johnson, former Yankee right-hander who once was a hoodoo for the Athletics, and Johnny Welch, recalled from Newark last year, promise better things on the mound for the Red Sox. McManus counts on rounding out a workable staff with Brown, the diminutive newcomer; Bob Kline, 220-pound sinker-ball expert; and Ivy Paul Andrews, who turned in sensational work last season after being obtained from the Yankees. Andrews won 14 and lost 7 with tail-end support.

In addition to Bob (Lefty) Weiland and Gordon (Dusty) Rhodes, the pitching possibilities include two promising novices, one is Lefty Allen Jones, from the University of Mississippi, possessor of an explosive "jug-handle" curve, and the other is Justin McLaughlin, also a portsider, recalled from Scranton.

The catching will be better this year if Johnny Gooch and Merrin Shea make good their comeback attempts. The attempted conversion of Jolley from the outfield to a post behind the bat is still an experiment.

The Fielders.

Alexander is no Hal Chase at first, but a hard worker and a real slugger. Hodapp has the call at second base. Gregory Mulleavy's hitting may give him an edge over "Rabbit" Warstler at short. Manager McManus has a rival for the third base job in Barney Friberg, formerly of the Phillies.

Camp followers at Sarasota look for a starting combination of Roy Johnson, Rob Seeds and Johnny Watwood in the outfield, with Fothergill, Tom Oliver and Tom Winsett, who hit .357 with Buffalo last year, as alternates.

If there's any payoff on experience, the Red Sox might get somewhere. Their roster includes men who have played with eight other big league clubs.

Silk Mill Bowlers Mercantile Champs

The substantial number of points they collected in the first contest of the round robin for the championship of the Mercantile Bowling League enabled the Silk Mill representatives to clinch the title although they lost to the Kingston Trust pinmen Thursday night at the Y. M. C. A. in four out of the five games rolled.

Final score of last night's battle was 2626 to 2549 in favor of the bankers, who although they outpointed the Weavers by 77, failed to overcome the grand total of the Millers for their efforts in all of the championship series. The total number of pins was the medium of choosing the champs.

Points were scored as follows:

Silk Mills	5071

Lace Mills	4954

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

In Babe Ruth's favor it can be said without much argument that he is still far and away the greatest gate attraction in baseball and that he has not yet failed in any single season, even when in a big slump or on the shelf for one reason or another, to draw enough extra cash customers to offset his presidential salary.

On the other hand the big slugger chooses to overlook three salient facts: (1) that he has slowed down to the proverbial walk in right field and on the bases; (2) that in his 40th year, scaling over 230 pounds on a ballet dancer's under-pinning, he is a bigger physical risk than ever before; and (3) that times and conditions have combined to hand baseball its biggest financial jolt since the Federal League war.

If you insist the Babe can't be blamed for getting all he can from the Yankees, particularly as his active days are numbered, you must recognize the equal justness of the club owner's desire to balance his budget in a season in which anything can happen. Any club "out of the red" at the end of 1933 will have something to cheer about.

The Yankees were one of the two clubs to make any money at all last year and they were at the top of the heap. Colonel Jacob Ruppert is the wealthiest of all the big league club owners. The Babe is one of his hobbies. But it also happens to be good business and a fair principle to deal with Ruth on the same basis as the rest of the star players.

Even at $50,000, the Babe's salary would be more than double that of any other star in baseball except possibly Gehrig, Simmons and Grove. It would be only $2,500 short of the pay Ruth received for each of five years, 1922-26, when he was at the peak of his greatness, as an all-around performer.

Let's Wait A While

"Blondie" Ryan, the young shortstop from Lynn, Mass., by way of Buffalo, not only has lived up to advance notices as a great fielder with the New York Giants but is "one of the smoothest, most graceful performers since the days of Larry Lajoie."

It's all very simple. All "Blondie" has to do now is step up to the plate and start smacking 'em the way the old French-Canadian used to do for Cleveland.

Remember Pepper Martin—the new Ty Cobb"?

Foxx vs. The Babe

Babe Ruth thinks his home run record will be safe from the fresh attack of Jimmie Foxx this year because, says the Bam, Al Simmons will not be in there to frighten the pitchers into passing him and then pitching to "Foxxy."

Mebbe so, but last season's figures show Simmons was walked only 47 times whereas Foxx prompted the firing line to give him 116 passes, regardless if what Al had happened to do. It was a case of jumping out of the frying pan into the fire, so far as the pitchers were concerned, and the fire—meaning Foxx—is still there.

My guess is the big farmer boy from Maryland, who went up to the big show as a kid with Home Run Baker's blessing, will come dangerously close to nudging Ruth's high mark of 60 right out the little red book.

Three Managers at City League Meeting

The first meeting of the City Baseball League at the city hall Thursday evening brought out three team managers who signified definite intentions of entering the loop this season. Matt Lenahan spoke for the Clow Dairy, Percy Slover the Schryver Lumber Company, and Jack McCardle, of the Kingston All Stars, for the Morgan Repealers.

Among others at the meeting were Benny Short, who handled the Talclet team last year and expects to enter a club in the 1933 pennant race; Herbie Mills, manager of the league champions last year, the Forst Butchers, and a spokesman for the Knights of Columbus, who was confident the Caseys would compete again.

Judge Culloton, president of the league, who presided, adjourned the meeting until Thursday evening, April 6, when more definite plans are expected to be made. The judge is anxious to open the league on Monday evening, May 15.

Two Girls To Play With Bruck Stars

Along with Mabel Wood, playing against the Long Island Ducklings at B. W. S. Hall, High Falls, next Wednesday, will be Violet Hale, another star of the Stone Ridge Rocknes procured by Pete Bruck to help his husky masculine All Stars in their battle against the visiting lassies who have one of the best lineups in the state.

Although no definite announcements have been made, Miss Wood probably will play Hattie Michaels, star forward of the Ducklings, considered one of the best in the country. Miss Hale likely will be in the forecourt for the Ridgers.

The game is the first mixed battle of the season and is expected to draw a capacity house. That the Ducklings are capable of mixing it with masculine contestants is borne out by their record of 14 victories out of 15 matches with boys' clubs, and by the ability they showed in defeating the highly touted Poughkeepsie Beckwith Girls 16-5 at the new armory recently.

There will be an attractive preliminary and dance to round out the complete program at B. W. S.

DeMolay Will Have A Baseball Team

Colonial Chapter, DeMolay, will be represented on the baseball field this summer for the first in several seasons, the initial practice date having been set as Sunday afternoon, April 2, at 1 o'clock. The drill will be held on the Kingston Fair Grounds diamond under the direction of Joe Ross, captain of the DeMolays.

Players expected to attend the practice are Al Blackwell, Pat McEntee, Eris Larson, Don Buswell, Had Follette, Clem Mackey, Bob Townsend, Leslie Evory, John Whitaker, Otis Valentine and all others interested.

Junior teams in Kingston and vicinity wishing to book the DeMolay nine may communicate with Joe Ross, 114 Wall street.

Latest News from The Baseball Front

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 24 (AP).—Charley Ruffing of the Yankees made his first appearance in an exhibition game against the Boston Braves yesterday. He allowed four hits in five innings, three of which came after two were out, struck out three, walked no one and permitted only one Brave to get as far as second base.

Dodgers Lose Punch.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 24 (AP).—Manager Max Carey would like to know what has happened to his Brooklyn Dodgers' batting punch all at once.

When the Dodgers dropped a 4-0 decision to the St. Louis Browns yesterday they completed 21 innings of exhibition baseball in which they've scored exactly one unearned run. They got only five hits off Brown pitching yesterday, two of which went to Tony Cuccinello.

Schumacher Stars.

Los Angeles, March 24 (AP).—Bill Terry's confidence in young Hal Schumacher apparently has not been misplaced.

Terry has worked patiently with the young pitcher from St. Lawrence University in the hope that he will fill one of the four stating assignments for the New York Giants this year. Schumacher turned in his best performance of the year yesterday when he blanked the Pirates with two hits over a five-inning stretch.

Followers of both quintets are anxious to see the outcome of the match long in the making, the Polish boys having been after the Morgans since the early part of the season. Rosenbloom Picked To Beat Goodwin, 2-1

New York, March 24 (AP)—A three-year dispute over the world's light heavyweight championship will be settled in Madison Square Garden tonight when Maxie Rosenbloom and Bob Godwin clash over the 15-round title route.

Godwin, 21-year-old youngster from Daytona, Fla., holds National Boxing Association recognition as king of the 175-pounders, and Rosenbloom is recognized by the New York State Athletic Commission. There will be no disputing the claims of the winner.

Rosenbloom, a veteran of ten years of constant ring warfare during which he has fought some 200 bouts against the world's leading middleweights and light heavyweights, rules a 2 to 1 favorite over the southern sensation with a few takers.

THE CURRENCY OF KINDNESS

By DOUGLAS MALLOH

WHO asks for favors first should pay
For favors in some other way.
I saw a fellow by the ditch,
His thumb extended for a hitch,
But did I pick him up? Not I!
I'd seen him pass so many by;
Their journey lonely, hard and far,
When theirs the journey, his the car.

Who asks for favors, who before
Has done a favor, asks no more
Than he has given. Thus we go
Through life and help each other so,
He helping you, you helping me,
With kindness for our currency,
The splendid coinage of the heart,
The coinage good in any mart.

Who asks for favors owes no debt
If kindness is with kindness met,
Accepted gratefully, and then
Is passed along to other men.
For acts of kindness done today
Tomorrow brings the chance to pay,
Though he who went and he who came
But very seldom were the same.

Composition of Snow

The atmosphere contains a small amount of ammonia and it is possible for the snow falling through the air to gather up some of this ammonia, just as it carries dust, minute organisms and impurities from the air. After the first snow has carried down these impurities, the remainder of the snow that falls is clean and practically pure. Newly fallen snow is very largely air, varying from three to thirty parts of air to one of ice crystals.

ONLY ALONE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WE SEEK so much for sympathy,
And some receive—yet presently
We find that we must take our cares,
Our sudden griefs, our own affairs,
Some other place a bit apart,
Some sanctuary of the heart,
Some private place to men unknown,
And fight the battle out alone.

Only alone we dare to tell
Ourselves the truth, and measure well
The reason and the circumstance—
For few misfortunes come by chance.
Only alone we dare to name
The culprit, if ourselves to blame,
Or teach our better selves to plead
Forgiveness for another's deed.

We try our cases in the court
Of friends, and there the truth distort,
But when we stand before the bar
Of conscience, speak things as they are.
Oft sympathy is hard to find,
Or, found, is often far too kind.
The care is ours, the cure our own,
And we shall find it, but alone.

JAP OFFICER TELLS OF HEROIC EXPLOIT

Three Men Act as "Human Bombs" to Clear Way.

New York.—Duplicating by their sacrifice the heroism of Japanese soldiers in the Russo-Japanese war and so adding to the military prestige of the Land of the Rising Sun, three privates in the Kurume division became the most talked of members of the entire army a year ago during the Shanghai offensive when, as "human bombs," they cleared the way for an infantry attack of the first tactical importance. The details of their exploit are chronicled for Occidental readers in "Japan Today and Tomorrow."

The incident took place in the early morning hours of February 22, 1932, and the three members of a corps of sappers who participated in the attack were Takeji Eshita, Josaburo Kitagawa and Inosuke Sakue.

All efforts to clear the barbed wire entanglements separating Japanese storm troops from Chinese trenches before the stronghold of Miohungchen had failed.

Offer Their Lives.

Finally the three infantrymen volunteered to destroy the entanglements even though the attempt must inevitably cost them their lives. Armed with high explosives filling a 12-foot bamboo tube, the fuse of which was lighted before they left their own trenches, the troopers dashed into the thick of the Chinese small arms fire. The three "human bombs" gained their objective. The ensuing explosion cleared a path 30 feet wide through the entanglements, through which the Japanese forces advanced to victory.

Captain Tamaki Matsushita, commander of the pioneer corps of which the three men were members, describes their dramatic sacrifice as follows:

"Three attempts to blow up the barbed wire proved futile. Men carrying the make-shift bamboo cylinders were either killed or wounded before they could arrive at their objective. They had no time to light the fuse after getting the bomb in position before they were picked off by the Chinese. As the final desperate attempt, the three lads, Eshita, Kitagawa and Sakue volunteered to carry the cylinders to the barbed wire with the fuse lighted, so that even though they might be wounded or killed, the destruction of the barrier would be accomplished.

Trio Blown to Bits.

"In a final desperate rush, the three, carrying the tube of explosives with its fuse alight, dashed for the entanglements. As they made their objective and as the tube left their hands, thrown under the wire, the cylinder exploded with a terrible detonation. With the barbed wire, the three men were blown to bits. They did not die in vain, for thanks to their sacrifice, a path 30 feet wide was opened up through which the Japanese forces made a victorious advance. They were the 'Three Human Bombs,' destroying the obstacle with their living flesh."

Speaking of Indian names, the daddy of them all in Massachusetts is Ch argoggagoggmanchauggagoggchuabunagungamaugg, the real name of what is commonly known as Webster lake.

Plan to Restore Once Famed Hartford Frigate

Hartford, Conn.—Plans to restore the famous old frigate Hartford with the pennies of school children of the nation and bring it here to Hartford, where it would serve as a nautical museum, have been initiated here.

The Hartford, which was Admiral Farragut's flagship in the battle of Mobile bay, probably is the most famous of the United States' fighting craft after the Constitution. It now is lying on the mud flats of Cooper river, Charleston, S. C.

While the ship's draft is between 15 and 16 feet, men who know her feel sure she could be brought up the Connecticut river at freshet time and anchored near here.

British Birth Rate Falls

GIRL SCOUTS

ULSTER COUNTY COUNCIL

MRS. G. W. ROSS, Commissioner.
MISS MILDRED H. EATON, Director.

Mrs. G. W. Ross, commissioner of the Ulster County Council of Girl Scouts, entertained the members of the Girl Scout Leader's Association, at a Twenty-first Girl Scout Birthday Tea, at her home in Port Ewen, on Saturday afternoon. A cheery open fire and gay spring flowers added to the setting on this delightful occasion, when leaders of Girl Scout troops from all parts of the county enjoyed the gracious hospitality of their hostess, as well as a social afternoon together.

Some time was devoted to an informal discussion of plans for the Annual County Rally and Camp Reunion, to be held, as usual, at Camp Wendy, the Girl Scout camp in Wallkill, on the first Saturday in June.

As the guests entered the dining room where dainty refreshments were served, the glimmering light from 21 green candles, surrounding a miniature Girl Scout on a festive birthday cake, was the object of everyone's attention. Miss Fairfax, a house guest of Mrs. Ross, presided at the tea table. In true Girl Scout style, the group sang several songs, before their departure, closing with the Girl Scout goodnight.

Pine Tree Troop, No. 4, Kingston: After opening the meeting, the Girl Scouts of Pine Tree Troop played games out of doors. Then we came in and Miss Follette gave us some good instruction in signaling, after which we enjoyed some signaling games. We learned a new song and closed with a goodnight circle and Taps. Scribe, Frances Dobie.

Troop 7, Kingston: On Wednesday, four new members were taken into our troop. They are, Doris Pervis, Caroline Newkirk, Jean Wisneski, and Margaret Lewis. We played some games, including nature and code games. Two weeks ago, we started to make pajamas. We have been up to the Singer Sewing Machine headquarters on John street twice, and expect to go again. We all like very much to go there as we sew on electric machines. The meeting closed with the usual goodnight circle and Taps. Scribe, Rose Helen Mellert.

Wild Rose Troop, No. 2, Ellenville: Our troop had planned to have a cake and candy sale, but has changed its plans. Instead, we are going to sell subscriptions for the Ulster County Times. We are getting a generous allowance for every subscription, and will use the money for transportation to the Girl Scout Rally, at Camp Wendy, in June. A committee was appointed to get more particulars. The Rambler Patrol gave an entertainment. Ethel Silverman has promised to take the patrol leaders and corporals on a hike in the near future. We all played a game led by Dot McConnell, our guest. At 9:30, we had a goodnight circle. Scribe, Zipporah Balotin.

Dogwood Troop, No. 1, Ellenville: On Friday the Girl Scouts of Dogwood Troop met at the Reformed Church. In the first part of our meeting we played a new game that everyone liked very much. In this game, there were 22 different things that each patrol had to locate or bring back with them. They were given half an hour in which to do this. An example of the things required was, "Bring back a January American Girl" (The American Girl is the official Girl Scout magazine). The Senior Patrol brought back a Girl Scout who was an American girl, born in January. Another was "Bring back a Girl Scout from another troop". The Senior Patrol scored highest with 18 points, and next was the Bluebird Patrol with 17 points. We closed with Taps and "The Golden Day Is Dying". Scribe, Patricia Taylor.

Anson Coutant of Tillson was in town on Sunday evening.

THE MEAL-TIME MARCH!
Tired Feet Across the Kitchen Floor
THE LEN-A-DOR SAVES STEPS

Why not let the LEN-A-DOR save you 24 Miles of Walking a Year?
BACK and forth . . . back and forth . . . carrying dishes to and from your refrigerator! Probably you've never counted the steps, but a noted home economist has. She found the average woman makes 46 trips a day . . . at least 48 miles of walking every year. The Leonard Electric will save fully half that time and effort . . . because it has the LEN-A-DOR. You can carry dishes in both hands on every trip, and a touch of the toe swings the door gently open. Only Leonard has it.
The new Leonard brings you everything you could desire in electric refrigeration . . . unusual beauty . . . exceptional roominess and ice capacity . . . quality that has been traditional with Leonard for 52 years . . . a mechanism backed by 15 years experience . . . and many extra convenience features.
